Life in the hallways and the classrooms of SCHS is happening. From the friendly laughter to the classtime chatter, students manage to have a pretty good time. Starting at center: Renee Brown and Michelle Gellasch celebrate fun times and giggles in Health class. The dynamic duo, Todd Maitland and Tim Griffin wait patiently together for their early morning NHS meeting to start. John Kuziel shows his enthusiasm for his private lesson. Bill Carver thinks "You can lead a horse to water..." while he guides Sarah Acton during horse-drop Bingo.

the crowning glory

Festivities travel to the 1300s

After months of study and planning, the Student Council revealed its plan for the 1995 Homecoming theme: Medieval Days.

The entire scope of the week changed its focus from the 20th century to that of the 13th century.

Games and festivities included a castle building contest, horse-pie bingo, Rapunzel's hair day, and king and queen day.

One of the most unusual features of this year's events was the announcement of the Homecoming Court.

In royal, and somewhat chilly style, Mr. Rose, dressed as the town crier, bid all the subjects of St. Clair High "welcome."

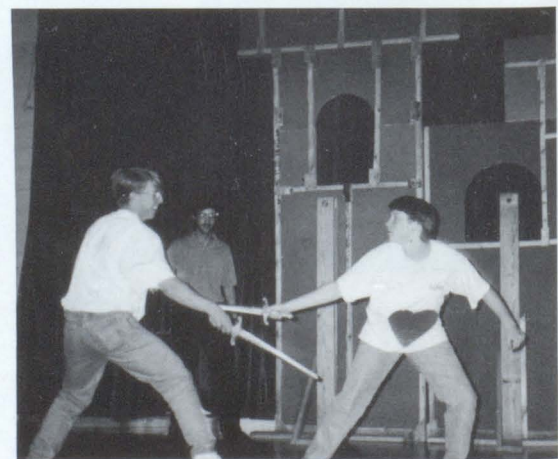

Court representatives were "escorted" onto their royal thrones by knights Bill Carver and BJ Pavlik.

Everyone thought it was a great success. Junior Monica McCartney admitted that, "the best part of the assembly was Mr. Rose's purple tights." So much for high fashion in the Middle Ages.

Defenders to the end! Jeff Dominick and Kari Roebke duel it out during the lunch time sword fight. Kurt LaFrance, always willing to improve his technique, watches in the background.

Lovely maidens they are! Nate Biringer, John Meredith and Tim McCulloch parade their medieval makeovers from guys to girls for the judges.

Damsel ring toss contestants Nicole Riedel (squatting) and Erica Gonzales aim for victory by tossing the rings on Nicole's hat.

Mike Ruckman's face captures the celebration of Homecoming week. Mike, along with Liz Schwehofer, Debbie Schulte and Justin Trombley, pause before the music continues during "musical thrones."

Nothing like wearing a little pie on your face to improve the complexion! Mr. Miller's facial was purchased courtesy of Chil Kurily and Ben Kaufman, who paid a total of $16 for the honor.

Saints rise to the challenge merry making

As has been the tradition, the seniors won both the float competition and the powderpuff game by a score of 14-0.

Stephanie Clark was especially pleased. "I didn't think we would lose...we had the right attitude." The juniors, though, are optimistic. Maura McCartan said, "We'll win next year because it's just tradition."

During half time, students competed in "horse-pie" bingo. No winner was declared because the horses didn't feel like "dropping" a chip.

Following the powderpuff game, students warmed up at the bonfire. Entertainment included a pie-in-your-eye raffle, where students could purchase the faces of either Mr. Rose or Mr. Miller for a creamy pie facial.

Homecoming week ended on a positive note for both football players and court representatives: a 40-0 victory over the Algonac Muskrats and a perfect fall forecast of no rain.

On Saturday, students and alumni gathered back at the high school for the homecoming dance entitled "Saturday Knight Fever."

Queen of the styro-tower, Amy Fandrick, whose tower reached 45 cups high, holds her breath till the final judging. First place went to the sophomore class in the create-a-castle contest.

Wearing purple tights and ringing the town crier's bell, principal Mr. Rose reads the Student Council's announcement declaring Homecoming Week 1995, the "Middle Ages."

Powder puff player Stephanie Clark readies herself for the big play. Although the weather was chilly, the seniors reigned victorious. The junior girls vow that "next year will be our winning year."

Drama maidens Corrine Zimmer and Sarah Wroblewski enjoy a motorized chariot ride in the parade.

Smiles reflect the surprise of representatives Chris Westrick and Debbie Schulte, who were elected Homecoming King and Queen.

Freshmen players Richard Bark, Jason Swoish, Tom Demeulenaere, Rob Woytta and Adam May cruise along in the Homecoming parade.

Surprised by their nomination, representatives Bobbi Jo Fraley and Curt Titus, sophomores, wait nervously on stage for the rest of the court nominees.

1. Who are the two juniors showing their favorite footwear upside down?

2. How many shoes make up this mountain of fancy footwear?

3. These freshmen feet belong to Katie Anderson and Brant Herzer. Can you tell which foot belongs to whom?

4. Sophomores Jay Robinson and Jenny Rowe model their fabulous feet. Which foot belongs to Jay?

gone footloose

Life's a Really Big Shoe!

We judge books by their covers and people by their hand shakes. Can we tell anything about a person based on the foot? Certainly!

Feet help us get to our destination and even support our individuality. What other fashion accessory could a person purchase by the closet-full? How many people do you know that have 23 pairs of shoes? Junior Nicole Ponzio does.

Her favorite shoes are "Dock Martens," which resemble work boots.

Uniqueness and individuality are part of "foot" identity for senior Rene Dellinger who would, "rather wear my Nikes than any other shoe." Rene's Nikes provide her with a comfy home for her "extra" piggy on her left foot.

Talent and coordination go "foot in foot" for freshmen Bridgette Walendzik and Amy Pauly whose feet help them dance and run. Along with their sophomore colleagues Ray Chamberlin and Brandon Chandler, Bridgette and Amy use their toes as "grabbers" to pick up objects off of the floor.

On the whole, the girls at St. Clair averaged 20 pairs of shoes, and males averaged three pairs each.

This formation of friends (back to front), Ryan Kuzera, D. Verhaeghe, D. Ross, C. Miller, B. Herxer, reveal their identities to the student body. They are the faces behind the feet.

5. Guess which seniors possess these "funky feet." (far left)

the name game

Can names tell us who we really are?

What exactly is in a name? It depends on who you ask. Juliet asks herself just that in the play Romeo and Juliet, as she is forbidden to date Romeo, a Montague.

Freshman Errol Miller is proudly named after actor Errol Flynn, who played the role of the great romantic film hero, "Robin Hood."

Some students have shortened versions of longer names. Bree Campbell's name is a form of "Bridgette," who is "the goddess of animals."

Both Matthias Henderson, freshman, and junior, Solomon Allen, acquired their names from Biblical persons.

Others are given names according to what date they were born. "Elflike," is the literal meaning for Nissa Rademacher's name, whose birthday falls on St. Patrick's Day. After which historical Washington was senior Georgette Kollmorgen named?

Harmony Studaker was named after a song, called "Boogy Child Harmony," composed by friends of her parents.

Just like a book, a person's name has a story all its own.

Drafting student extraordinaire Seyward Moskwa, who was named after her grandfather, works diligently on her design for Mr. Thoel's class.

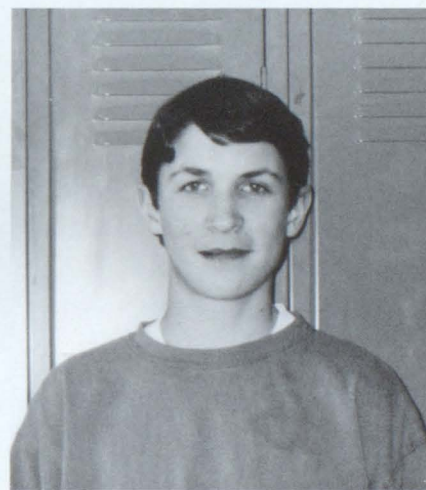

Art II student Vincenzo Minano adds detail to his face mask, a project requirement during first semester. Vince is named after his uncle.

Senior Chil Kurily's name in Korean means "seven stars."

Chantell Pyryt, senior, is named after a lost love of her father's.

Jenhis Dunkel, who works at Faith Medical, was named after a close friend of his father's who lives in South Carolina.

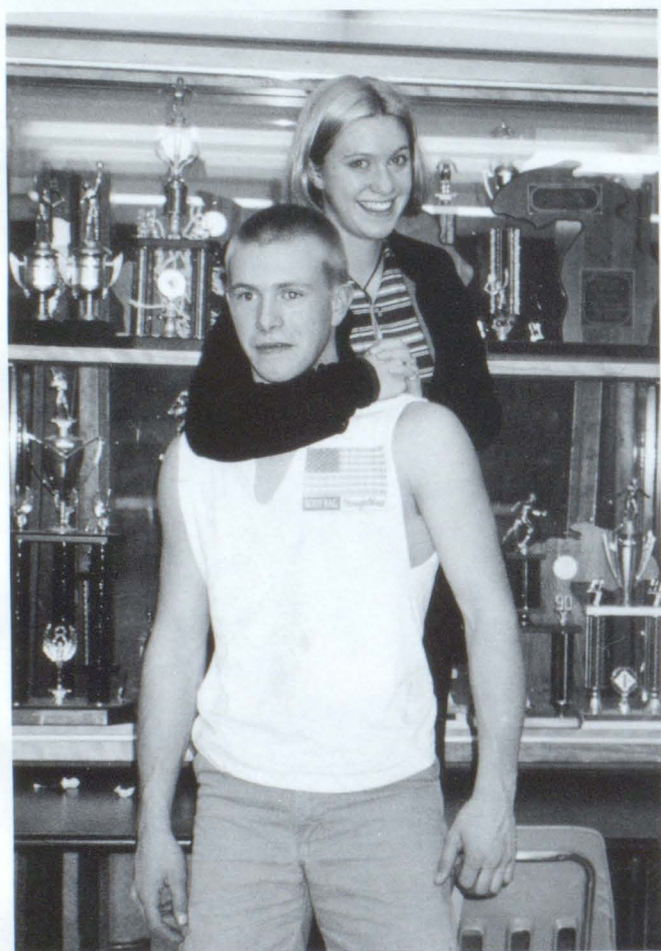

"Peaceable" is the Biblical meaning of junior Solomon Allen's name, who helped design last year's yearbook cover.

Tenth grade Chemistry student Athena Bushay's name is reminiscent of the ancient city of Athens, in Greece.

Michelle Demers, freshman, throws her brother Nate, a senior, into a headlock, but it doesn't seem to phase him.

Disposable brotherhood? Probably not! Brian Chase, junior, affectionately threatens to introduce younger brother, Kevin to Mr. Trash Can.

Birch sisters, Laura, a freshman, and Sarah, a junior, say that they never have to fight over sharing the phone at home.

Dellinger sisters, Renee and Kristy don't have much opportunity to see each other at school, so catching a quick chat at lunch is a nice change of pace.

Make way for me! in no one's shadow

Most SCHS students have a sibling or two, but not very many have the "pleasure" of going to school with one of them.

What do freshmen think about attending school with older siblings? "It doesn't really matter-I never really see my brother," confessed Robin Browning about her brother Chris, a junior.

Some siblings just don't have the time to see each other during the day. Pete McDonnell commented about brother Nate, a senior, "basically, it's the same as going to school without him." Outside of school, the brothers get along and often hang out together.

Rob Woytta feels differently. "Going to school with Laura has its pitfalls." The two don't see each other a lot at home because of different interests.

Kelly Maniaci enjoys the advantages of going to the same school as her brother, Tony, and sister Megan.

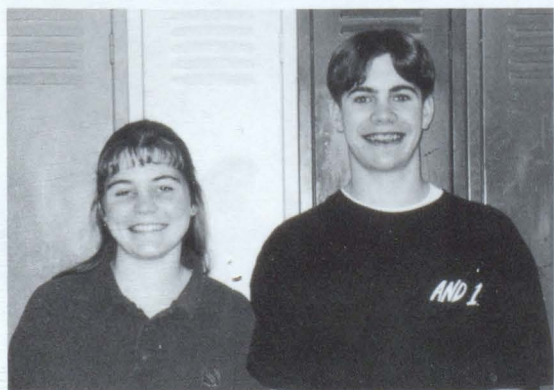

Kelly explained, "it's nice to know they are here. Whenever I need anything I know they can give me a hand."

It may seem that sharing high school with a sibling could be traumatic, it's not as bad as it's made out to be.

Although Julie Watkins is smiling while standing with brother T.J., she's really thinking "Why is he taller than me and he's only a freshman?"

Nate McDonnell, senior, and freshman brother Pete, make faces at each other in the library.

TV Shows Gain Popularity

Television viewing was the rage for teens who grew up in the '50's. "Gidget," starring Sally Field as an average teen gone surfer-girl, is the equivalent to NBC's current show "Friends."

Shows like "Friends," "ER," and "Home Improvement," are ruling the airwaves. Sophomore Amanda Seals, who watches "ER," thinks it gets its top ratings because, "It's dramatic-very dramatic." However, there is one change in the show's set-up she would like to see. "If I was the director, I would make George Clooney more of a central figure in the show."

Kevin Schneider, who watches T.V. four days a week, would love to be a guest on "Home Improvement" because he likes Tim Taylor's situations.

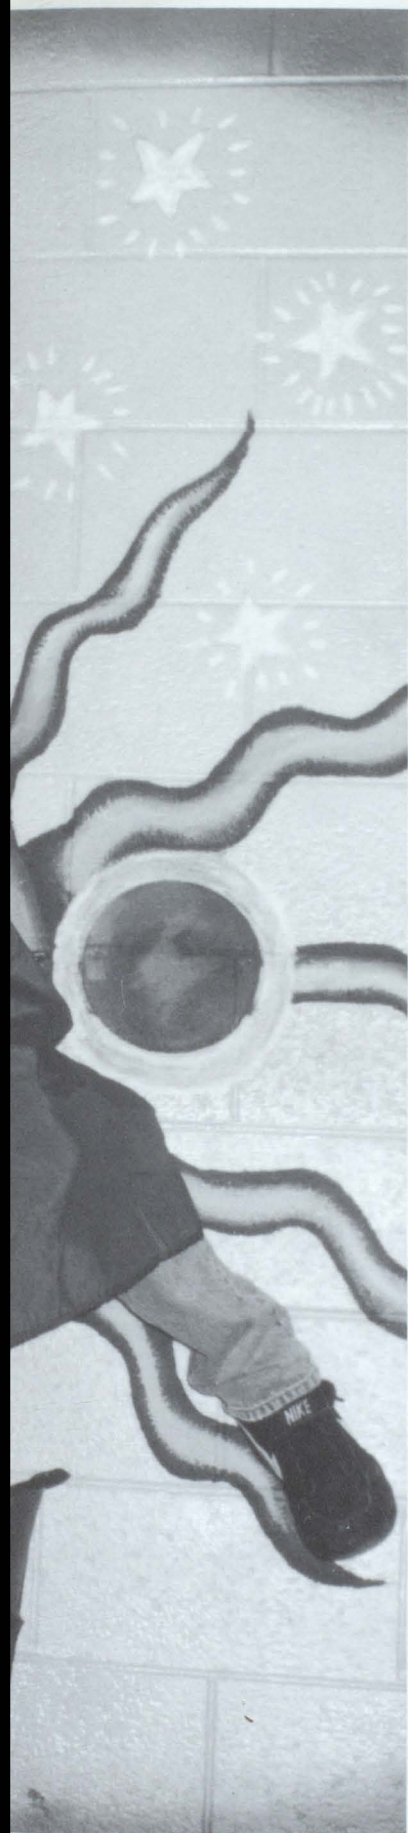

Both Kurt Moran and Sarah Likins share an interest for the show "Friends," and would like to see the return of Marcel the Monkey.

Other student favorites include "The X-Files," "Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman," and "Seinfeld" still remains a favorite. This year, most students seem to think programming is the best on NBC.

Soaring miles above the earth, Brandon Sawdon is flying high over his favorite show "Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman."

Nurse Amanda Seals is all set for a guest starring role on "ER."

Channel-surfing may be Nicole Riedel's hobby, but at the moment she's surfing on the table.

Kurt Moran & Sarah Likins guard their favorite "Friends" character, Marcel.

Handyman hopeful Kevin Schneider models himself after his idol "Home Improvement's" tool totting Tim Taylor.

John Meredith and Adam Neuman have a brawling battle over which of their favorite shows are better: "Friends" or "Seinfeld."

Sports fan Elaina Hall, finds hockey to be one reason to stay at home on Friday nights.

Junior Amy Shields puts in one of her favorite scunchies out of her vast collection.

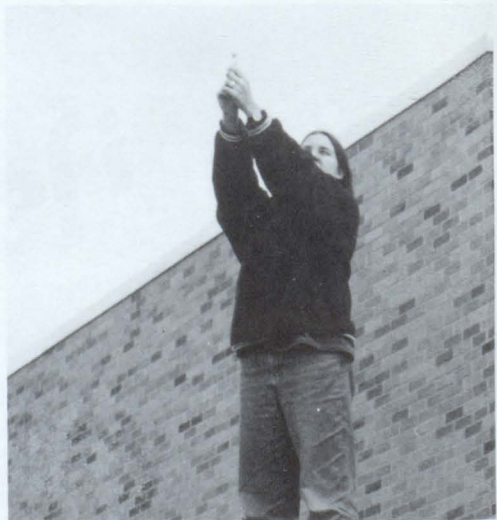

Pencil-chewer Kris Vincent gnaws her way through a difficult assignment.

hooked on spinach

Juniors Reveal the Meaning of Fetish

Just like Linus and his blanket, there are a few things that some people just cannot live without.

A few students admitted to needing much to make their lives more pleasant. Melissa Ranger is obsessed with The Doors. "To me, Jim Morrison is a god," Melissa expressed.

Adraine King also has a musical obsession. "I have to listen to Tori Amos every morning, and I always talk about her," said Adriane. Amos' music is a mix of alternative and classical styles. Larry Sieczynski prefers the sound of his own music and explains, "I like to play my drums."

Some juniors' tastes run towards the athletic side. Todd Maitland openly admits that "St. Clair football has been my passion." Amanda Cummings agreed, commenting that she loves running track.

Other quirky obsessions with juniors range from pen and pencil chewers to being girl crazy, as Jeff Tackaberry readily admits. Amy Shields, who has long hair, finds hair-ties and scrunchies to be a real collection problem for her!

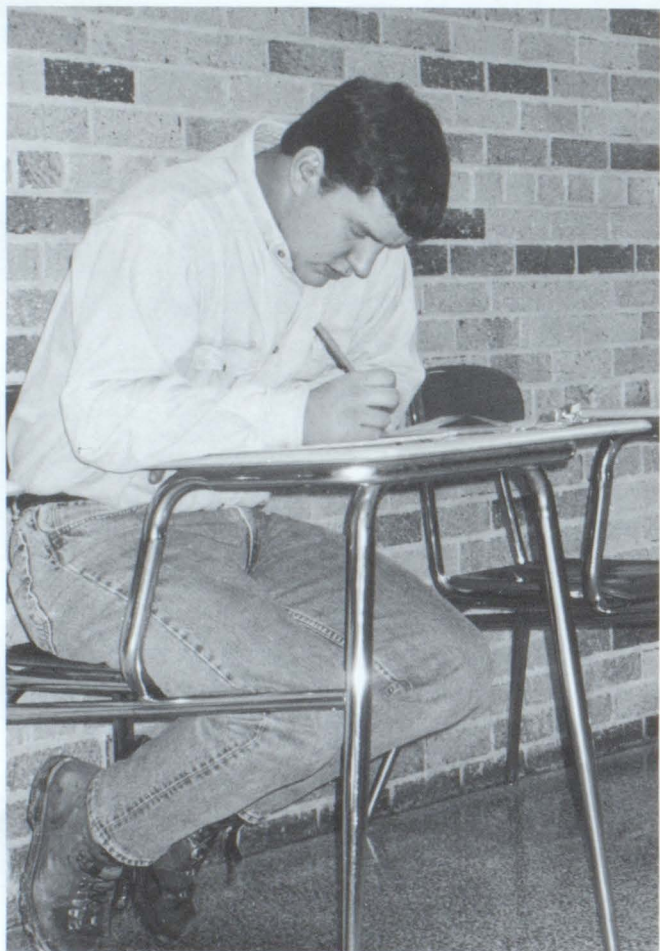

Without gum or a beverage in arms reach, Trisha Askew finds herself lost in the world.

Neatly trimmed hedges are the ultimate goal for junior Tony Maniaci, who has a thing for well-manicured shrubbery.

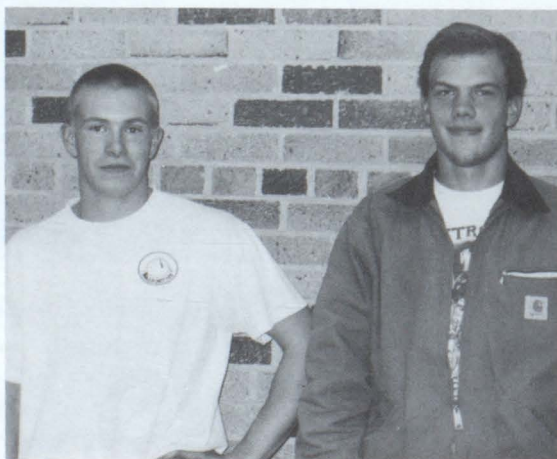

Scott Beedon hopes to keep in touch with co-worker and friend, Chris Fisher by writing each other.

Best Friends, Tanja Gauthier and Megan Treutle will remain friends even though they will be miles apart while away at school.

Ryan Kuzera and Eric McWain, who want to take a year off before attending college, plan to get an apartment together after they graduate.

Hunting buddies Nate Demers and John Eberling plan to keep in touch by calling each other. Nate plans to go away to college.

keeping in touch

Friends beyond graduation

Before that June graduation date hits, seniors have lots of worries and decisions ahead of them. What college do I choose? Where do I look for a job? How will I keep in touch with my friends who leave?

Courtney Westmiller, who plans to go to college out of state, gave this question a lot of thought. One of the friends that she will miss the most is Mandy Closs. "Mandy has been my friend 'til the end...she's always there for me."

Courtney plans to keep in touch with Mandy by calling or sending postcards.

Exchange student, Romina Bauza, who goes home to Mexico in May, said that it will be difficult for her to keep in touch with her friends and family here in America. She has become close friends with her host sister Chantell Pyryt, making the goodbye even more difficult. Romina commented that, "I have enjoyed my stay here very much."

Romina hopes to stay in touch by writing and calling the Pyryts, but also hopes to come back in a few years to visit everyone.

There are others that don't know how they will stay in touch with friends. Charles Neruda and Scott Yeip admitted that they haven't given it much thought yet, but do plan on staying in touch.

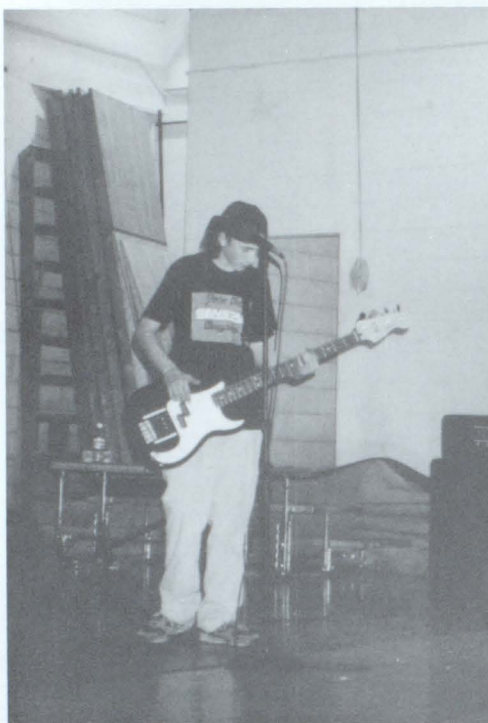

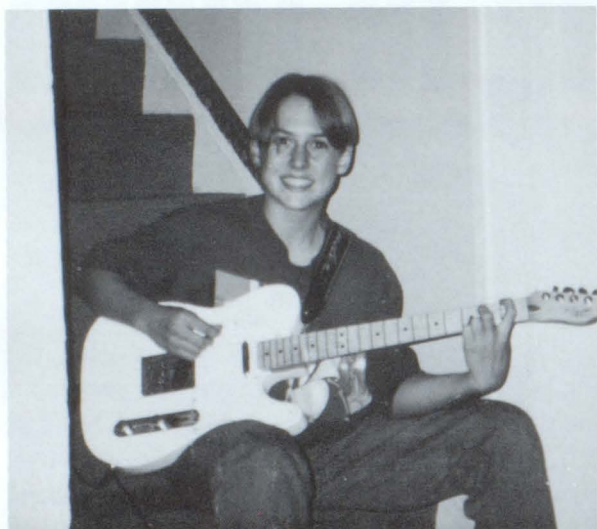

Arthur Gilbert will miss all of his friends and hopes he will be able to keep in touch with them somehow next year.

Crystal Karas and Stacey Carnahan, friends since elementary school, hope to remain friends long after graduation.

Rodney Libby, a member of the band "Magic Mushrooms," demonstrates his ability to play the guitar.

Sophomore Jenhis Dunkel practices after school for the "Battle of the Bands" audition, sponsored by Student Council.

Freshman Ralph Hornibrook exclaims "I forgot my guitar pick! How can I finish this session?"

The band members of "Magic Mushrooms" R. Libby, R. Hornibrook, J. Alter and J. Porter take a break to smile for the camera.

"'Minus Mat' is a tantalizing concoction of energetic punk rock," stated guitarist Sean Galvin.

Making Musical Notes tuning up together

Being a freshman has nothing to do with lack of experience when it comes to music. Freshmen, Rodney Libby, Ralph Hornibrook and Jim Alter have a band called "Magic Mushrooms." Rodney and Jim play guitar along with the main singer Ralph, who also plays guitar. Jeff Poter who does not go to SCHS, plays drums for the group.

The band, who classify themselves as Metal/Rock, practice "about once a month, usually on Fridays from 5 pm until 7 am, basically until we can no longer move," said guitarist Rodney Libby.

These young musicians are off to an excellent start. They have played at the Alternative Octave Unplugged Coffee House, Southern Thumb Music and have been on Channel 6. "We hope that all this volunteer work will pay off and we'll soon play for money."

Hard rock band, "Minus Matt" consisting of Derrick Benvenuti, Jenhis Dunkeland and Sean Galvin, who plays the drums for the band.

Recently "Minus Mat" played at the "Battle of the Bands" dance here at school, along with the bands "White Out" and "Grady's Ripple."

"Minus Mat" member Derek Benvenuti warms up for his band's exciting performance.

While performing his solo, Jim Alter focuses his concentration on the song.

Action-packed adventures with friends

It would seem that with ten different school related sports, students could find something in school to satisfy their competitive needs. Many students, though, find their athletic fun outside of school.

Brian Carrier digs his pedal bike. Once though, he "flipped over the handlebars and fell in the mud... even worse, I was run over just a second later!" Despite his accident, this racer has won four first place ribbons and many trophies.

Some students get together and enjoy a pickup game. Dannett Slamka quipped, "I live right across the street from the Little League park; impromptu games happen often. It's a blast!"

Classmate Simon Douglass agrees, "I play soccer a lot with friends. I have fun with them and with my team, but I wish there was a school soccer team."

Tim McCulloch enjoys the great outdoors by camping and fishing. Although he's an expert fisherman, he doesn't recommend fishing with a cast. "I made the mistake of wading with a bag over my cast. It got wet and a few days later, it really started to stink."

Whether with a friend, pet, or all alone, students enjoy walking. Bridgett Jeroue stated, "When I get bored or stressed out, I go for a walk. It helps me to relax, and it gives me time to think."

Brian Carrier, freshman, can handle the long wait in line at OJ's only by thinking happy thoughts of entering his BMX bike in a race.

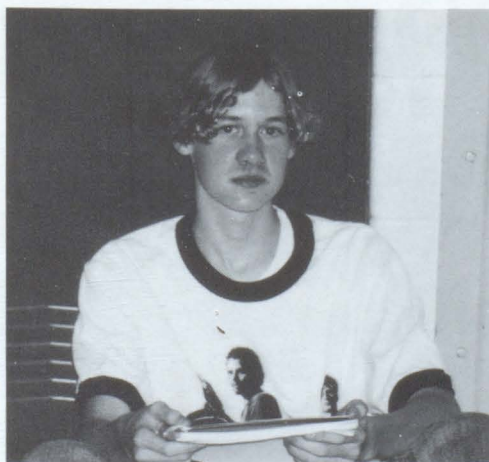

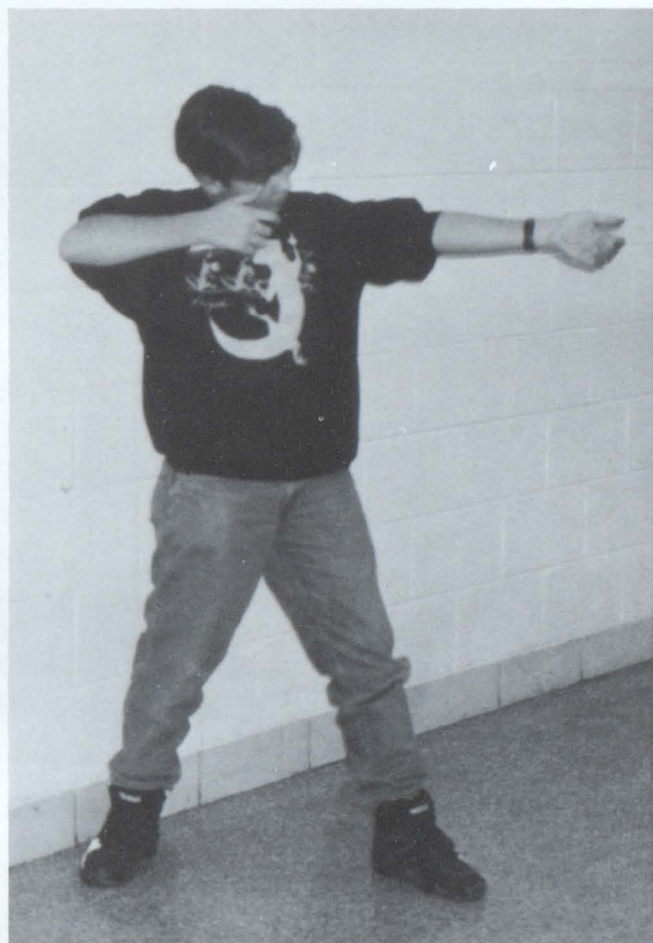

Sophomore Ben Skudrna tries his best to concentrate on his magazine while pushing thoughts of skateboarding out of his head.

Window washing is freshman Margaret Hayden's outdoor activity of choice. Mr. D'Angelo's Applied Math classes use hands-on projects to better their math skills.

Junior Jim Johnson demonstrates the position for shooting the pellet-gun, his favorite pastime.

Sledding extraordinaire Brandon Chandler dreams of the snowy day when he will be dragged behind a snowmobile driven by his brother, Travis.

Angela Kreusel, senior, likes the freshness of outdoors and uses running as her excuse to enjoy it.

Kevin Gurne enjoys his favorite food. At home, Kevin's parents order pizza for dinner about once a week.

Wendy Willmott, who spends her summer at camps and out with her friends, thinks about all the fun she's had.

"I didn't do it! It wasn't me," exclaims Nick May. Nick's parents "tolerate" a house of three jokesters; two of whom still attend high school.

Carissa Emerich and Jenny Pauli get away from their parents at a Saints football game.

Ruling over the homefront the parent trap

Conflicting ideas and interests between parents and students are the "rule" not the exception. In order to compensate for these "regulations," students often turn to lies and tricks.

When explaining to her parents why she was late, junior Corrine Zimmer stated that, "My car was blocked in and I couldn't get out." This excuse works on her mom, even though she is the more strict of Corinne's two parents.

Seniors Tara Strickler and Tim McCulloh, boast that their parents consider them responsible enough to suspend the curfew requirements that many students have.

Another common excuse used to bail out of parental restriction is "traffic was really bad." Michael Callahan has relied on this line several times after breaking his curfew.

Sarah Likins, sophomore, who does not have a curfew, still has an excuse ready if she returns home too late. She often says, "We were watching movies and lost track of time." This shows some creativity in excuse making. We should all take lessons from Sarah.

John Stockwell, whose mom only lets him cook microwave pizza at home, cooks up a classroom experiment.

While in English class, Mark Brinker and Stephanie Salisbury swap secrets to sneak in the house late.

Friendly Differences Make Life Interesting

Do you ever wonder how people become friends? How you became friends with one of your friends?

Most people think friendships happen because people share things in common.

Senior Ken Stockwell disagrees. He commented, "First of all, Tracy Zobl and I are of the opposite sex. We also hang out with different people, and she's a better athlete."

How do people meet their friends anyway? Renee Tylen and Megan Rose met while on the swim team.

Megan and Renee are opposites because "Megan and I believe in different things," Renee explained.

Sophomore Jeremy

Mansell declared, "I've known B.J. since first grade." Jeremy wishes that he could be more like his friend, whom he claims is "really laid back."

Although these friends have their differences, they still get along great and have a good time together. You know what they say, opposites attract.

Don't be misled by this picture. Freshmen Jarod Thorne and Chris Lee are great friends.

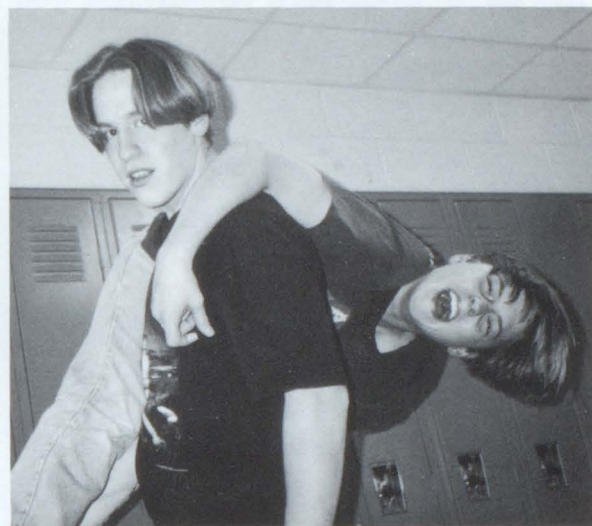

Juniors Jennifer Ferlito and Katie Tuohy credit each other with being a great friend.

Rodney Libby and Ralph Hornibrook are opposites because "Ralph is so big and strong and I'm so little and wimpy."

B.J. Beauchamp and Jeremy Mansell are definitely dedicated to their studies.

Lauren Blaskowski says that she wouldn't change anything about the friendship she has with Courtney Westmiller, even though they're somewhat opposite and enjoy different things.

an elegant affair

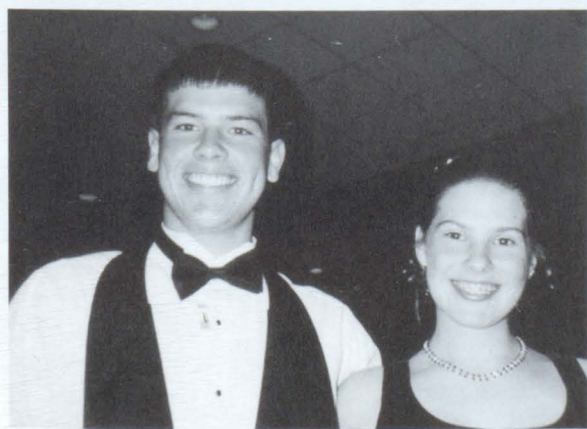

Dancing the night away

A new location at the Crystal Gardens gave this year's prom an elegant flare.

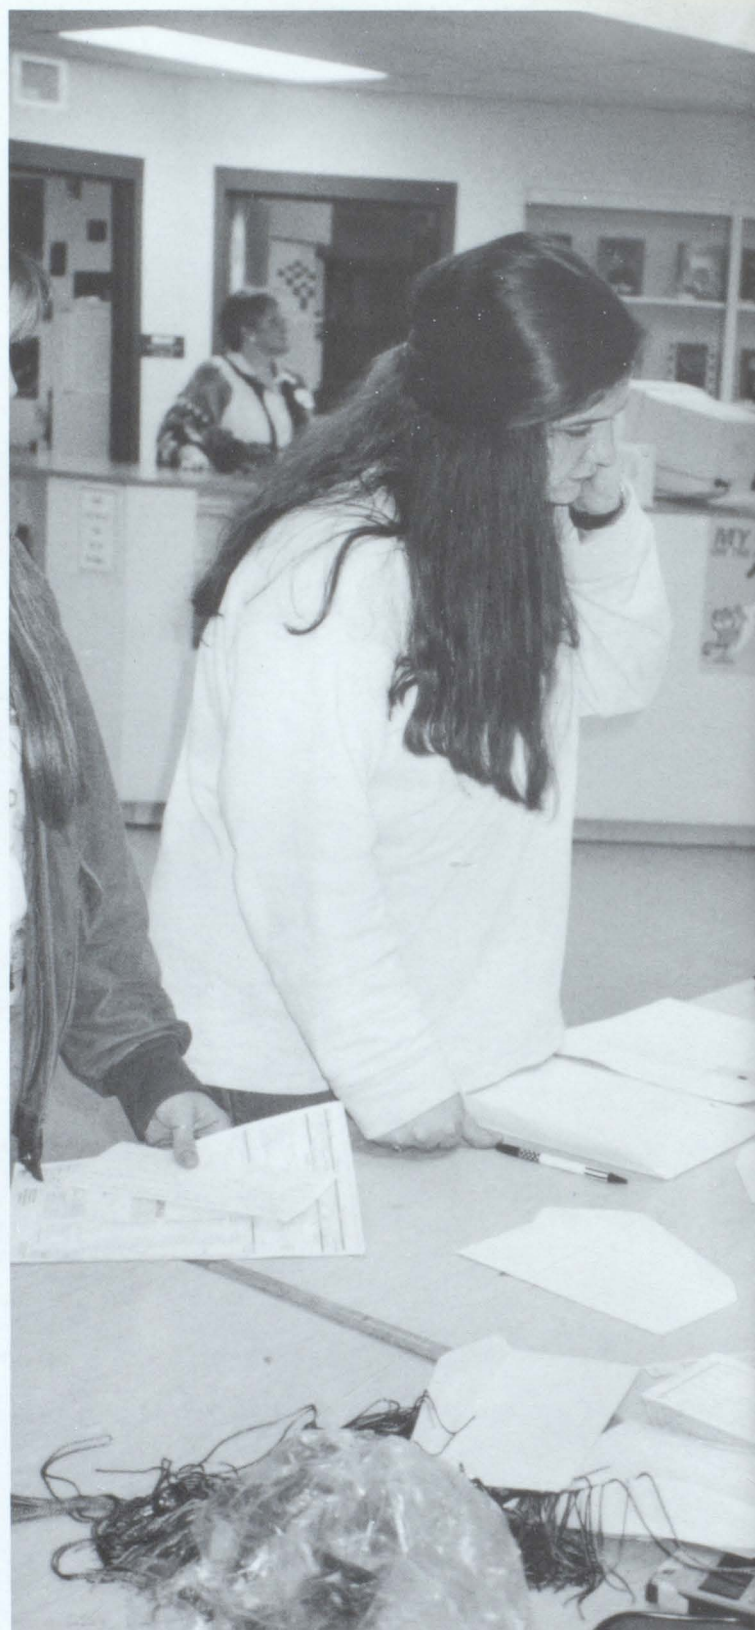

Elegance and music complimented the prom's theme, "Set the Night to Music," and students kept the dance floor filled all night.

Allison Goozen and Dave Fajardo were honored by juniors and seniors as "prom king and queen."

anticipating the moment when the tassels move from right to left means a lot for the ...

Graduation is one of the most memorable times in a student's life. It marks the passage from being a teenager to becoming an adult.

Tom Becka reflected for a moment on leaving high school. "After four years of high school, you suddenly have to grow up and move on to something different," he stated.

This process of "moving on" is represented by the class song, "It's the End of the World as We Know It," by REM.

Most seniors have mixed feelings leaving friends and classmates behind.

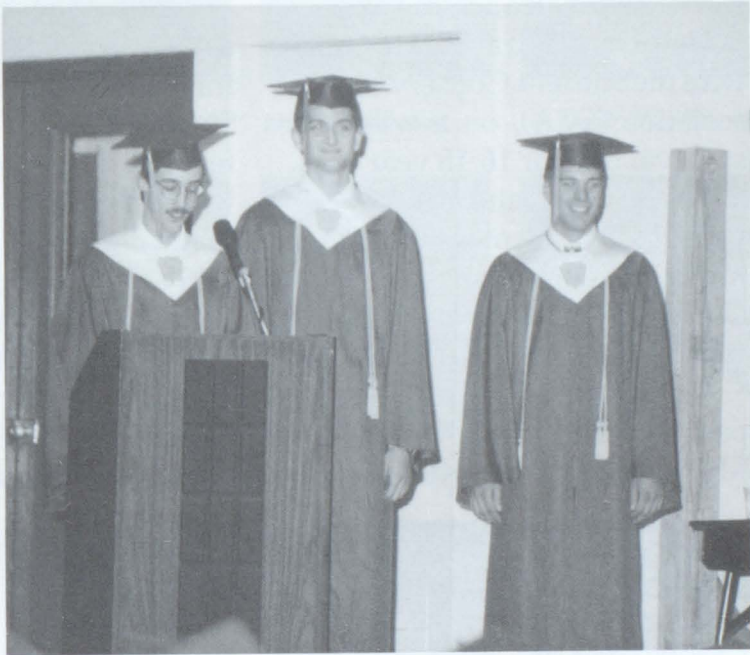

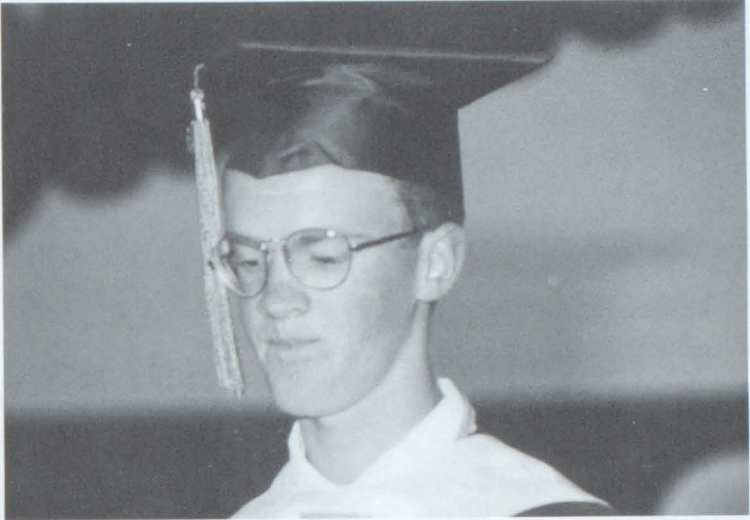

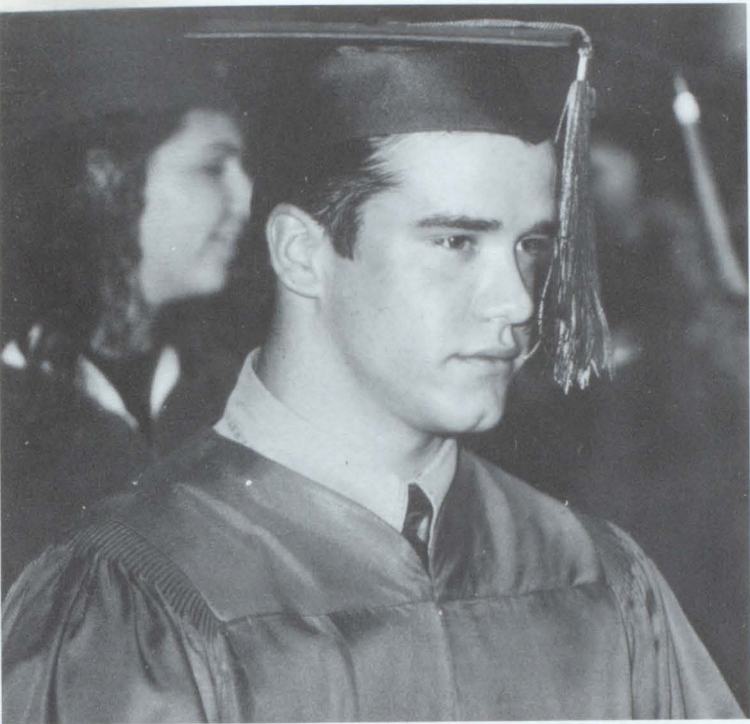

Andy Gunn concluded that he is unsure when he will see his classmates again. "Graduation will be an emotional day," he added.

The graduating class of 1996 consisted of 140 seniors who met the requirements set by the school board.

In their Co-Salutatorian address, Kurt LaFrance, Dave Masterson and Tim Neiman welcomed everyone to "Flight 1996, with service to the rest of your life."

Valedictorian Ben Kaufman wished his classmates farewell and safe keeping of good memories from SCHS.

O S U E N B I O U R N S D

Summer vacation presented opportunities for a handful of seniors to go on expedition. These explorers combed mountainsides, traveled to historic sites and even learned a few leadership skills.

Nate Demers traveled to Oregon with the Student Conservation Association (SCA), on a wilderness survival trip for 16-18 year olds.

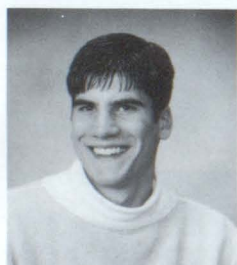

On the trip, Nate did a little gold mining. One memorable moment involved a rattle snake. "I stood and watched as it was being prepared to be eaten," Nate exclaimed.

Classmate Kurt LaFrance was part of a ship wreck dive in Lake Michigan. At right, Kurt pops his head up from the submarine used in part of the underwater exploration. Bad weather hindered Kurt's job video taping the ship wreck and its treasures.

Visiting sites was also on the agenda for Jennifer Rock, who traveled to Oklahoma City for a Student Council leadership conference. As part of her trip, there was a stop to the site of the Oklahoma bombing.

"The explosion left a massive impact on the surrounding buildings," Jennifer said solemnly. "Hundreds of tributes to those whose lives were lost...a very impressionable image."

Starting off with a ride on the Reading Railroad, the seniors had a night of fun and games at the All-Night Party.

Roller-blading through the halls for the last time, the seniors had many things to keep them busy, like staring in their own music video, or posing for a wild west photo.

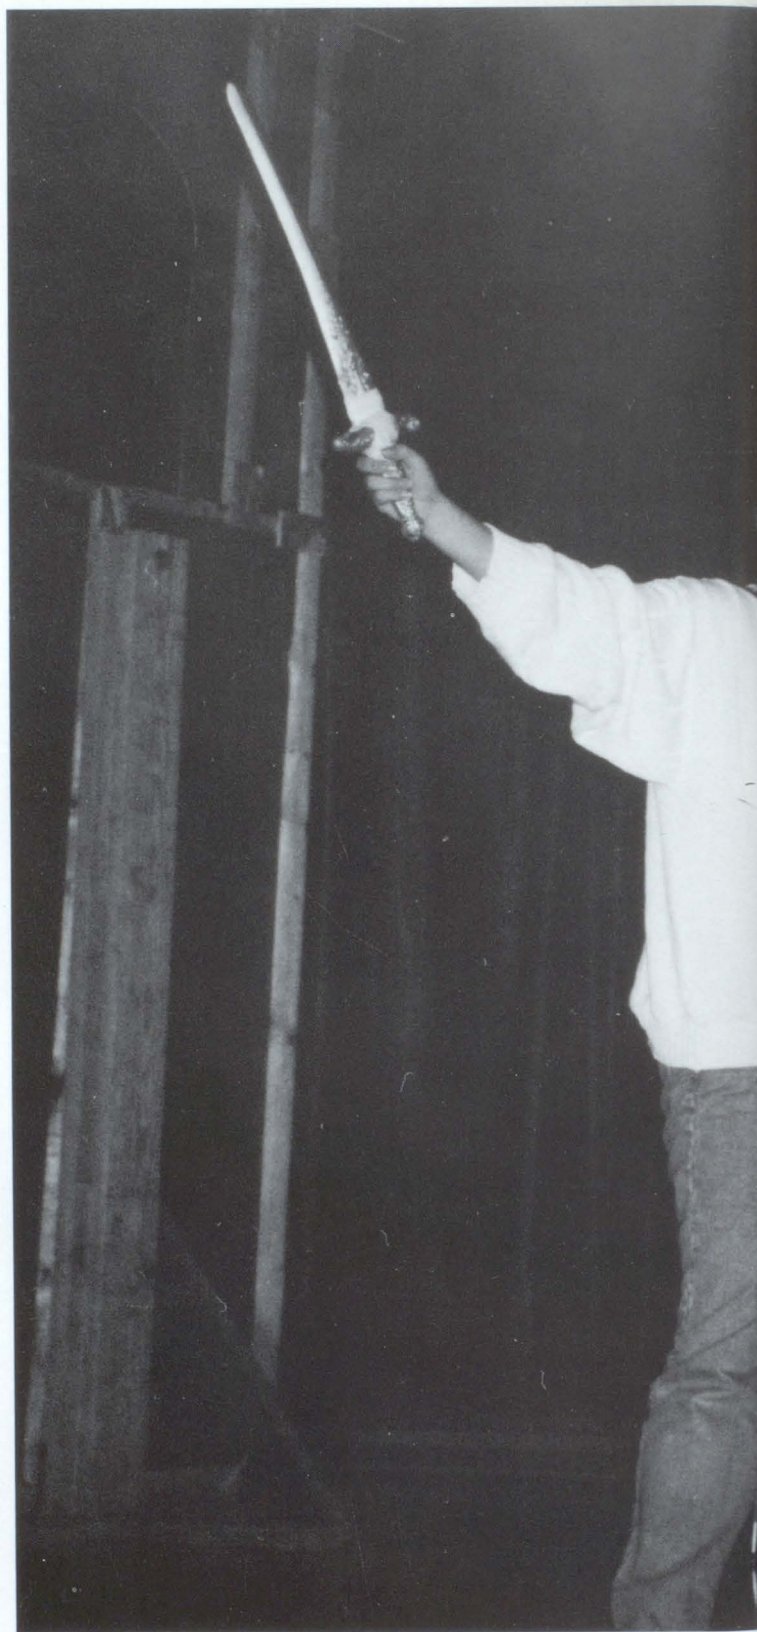

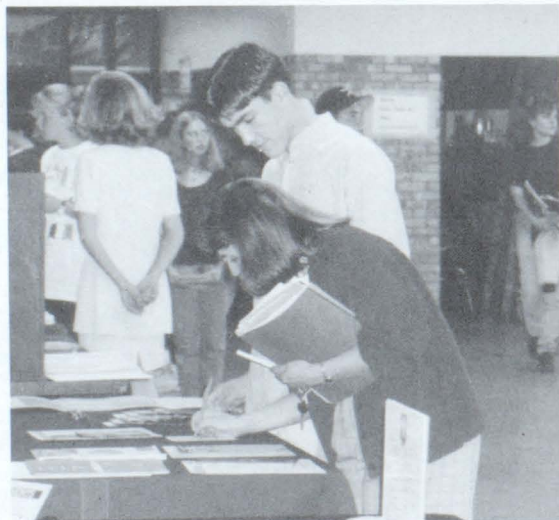

It was a night to remember thanks to all the parents that made it a success.

LOOKING f o r CHANGE

Long after "Home Alone II" left the local theatres, it lingered on in St. Clair as "Hoe Alone II."

Have you ever went past the old movie theatre downtown and wondered what else could be done with it?

The juniors had some creative ideas for renovating the theatre. Lisa Kostiuk said "I would turn it into an underwear outlet, having all shapes, sizes, colors, and fabrics of underwear."

Turning it into a hockey rink for the area kids was suggested by Dan Michalski.

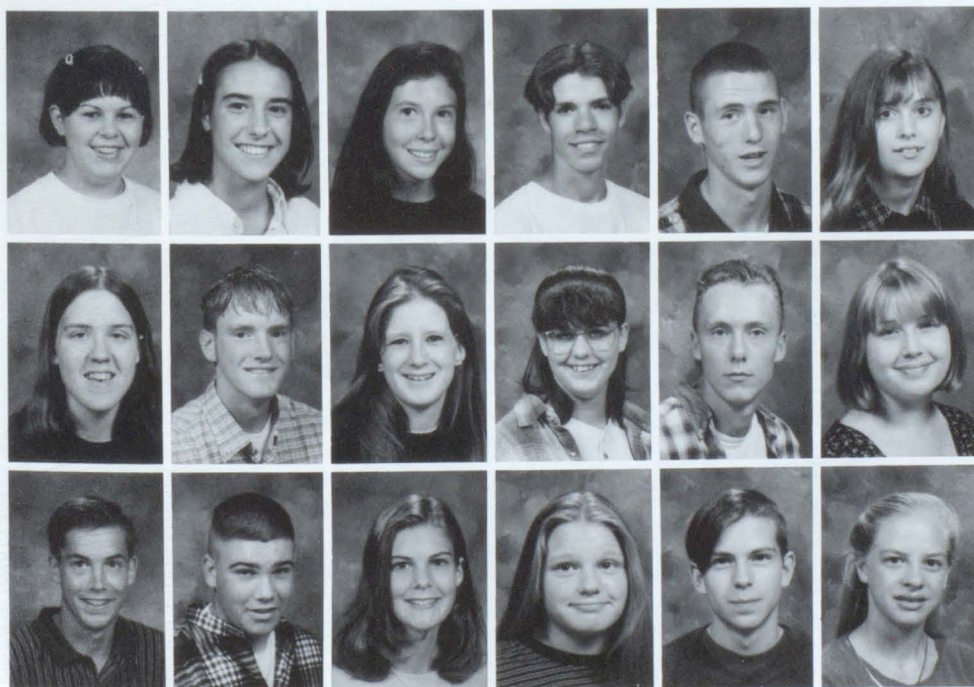

Star-gazer Nicole Piacentini thinks it would be a neat idea to turn it into a planetarium because "there's nothing like that in St. Clair."

Falling arrows, not stars, are Nick Burke's hobby, and he would change the theatre into an indoor archery range.

Both Nick Burke and Nicole Piacentini advertise their ideas for renovating the old downtown St. Clair movie theatre.

WISHING for SUCCESS

When Aladdin met the genie, the genie granted the young lad three wishes. If you had three wishes what would they be?

Ron Kotecki commented that one of his wishes would be "to sing the National Anthem at the Super Bowl."

Carrie Krzyzanski wants to "change someone's life for the better and travel around the world."

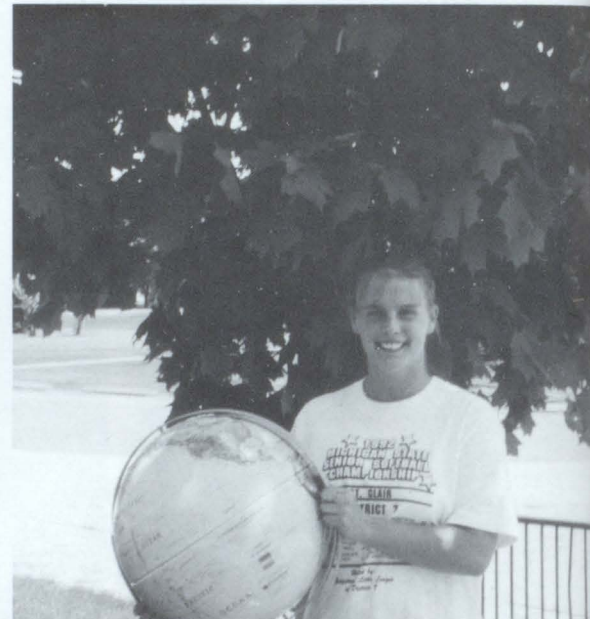

Many juniors wished for more wishes that would help them become successful, or to have a large amount of money.

"I want to have a college named after me, and for doctors to find a cure for AIDS," stated Jill Blaskowski.

Imagine a new marquis outside of St. Clair High (or the University of Michigan) that reads: Jill Blaskowski University and Research Center!

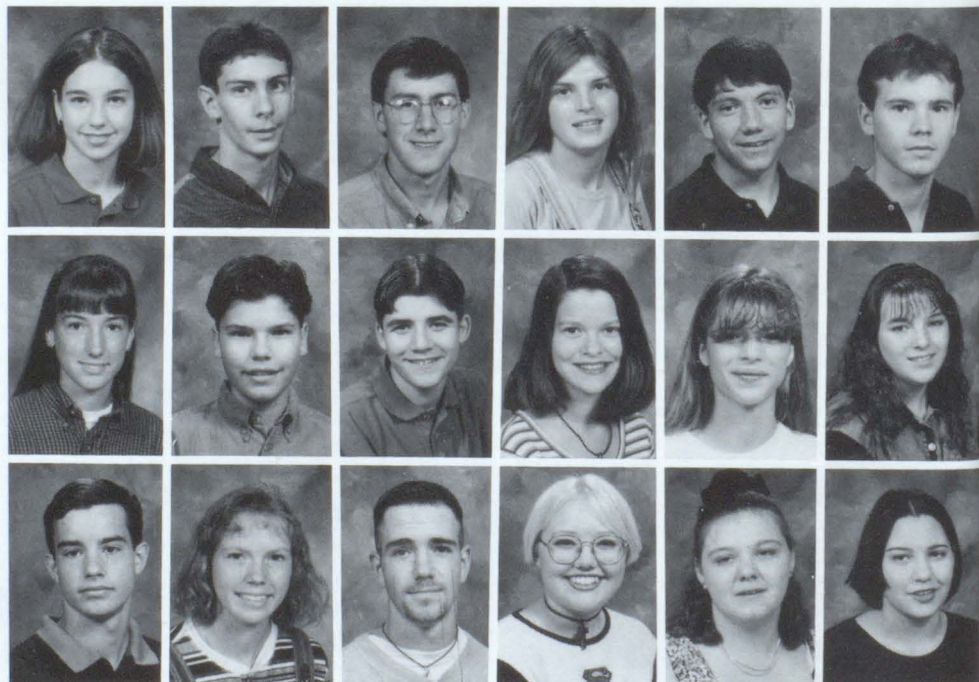

As part of her world travels, Carrie Krzyzanski some day hopes to visit as many different countries as possible.

LEARNING JOURNALS

Have you ever gone away from your family and friends for six weeks? How about for an entire school semester?

These exact circumstances happened to Joe Biringer and Joy Seletsky, respectively. They both left family and friends to explore the world around them.

Joe, who went to Illinois for six weeks, learned first-hand the skills needed to become an archaeologist. Joe heard of the "National Science Foundation Young Scholars Program" from Sociology teacher Ms. Osterland. He thought it would be "interesting and fun to go on a dig."

During his archaeological adventure, Joe and his digging buddies came across a few unique objects, including a stone drill and several pieces of pottery.

Although Joe felt isolated at first, there were so many activities, that the homesickness subsided.

Joy Seletsky, whose adventure was quite the opposite of Joe's, was busy for the entire fall semester of school.

As a page for Congressman David Bonior, she had many duties including running packages and messages to the Capitol Building and answering the phone.

Joy recommends the page program to anyone who is independent and works hard. "It was a great introduction to the real world and it made me realize the importance of hard work and dedication."

After a mud fight in 101 degree heat, Joe Biringer's tee-shirt looks more like lost art than clothing.

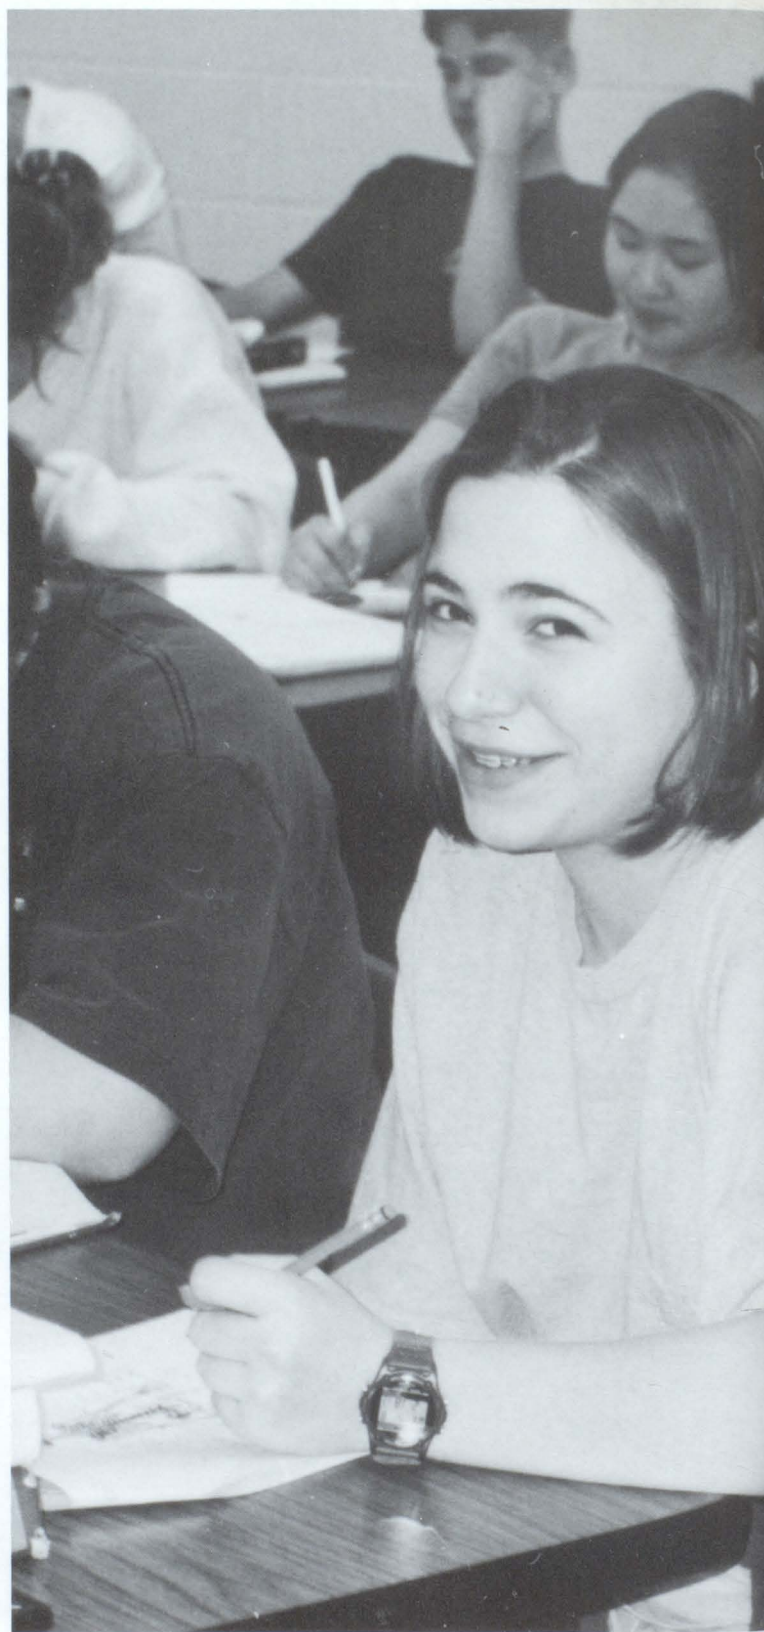

Full of pride, Joy poses in the hallway of the Capitol Building, anxiously awaiting her next errand.

In the White House Press Room, Joy practices giving a speech for her upcoming political career.

BUILDING f o n d MEMORIES

Medieval float parties took a turn towards the future with the sophomore float.

The sophomores' enthusiasm helped to make their float parties full of good times and fun. For Curt Titus and David Severin the float parties were a time to get together with friends.

Melissa Standen saw it as a great opportunity to do something beneficial for her class.

Sarah Wroblewski and Kari Roebke volunteered their homes and their time to building the sophomore float, which was two chess pieces dressed as St. Clair and Imlay City football players. Taking a look at their finished product, the sophomores agreed it was the best float they had built to date.

ROME-ING the HALLWAYS

If Julius Caesar were a sophomore, what would his interests be? Who would he be friends with? How would he dress?

Sophomores in Lit. and Comp. who read Shakespeare's play, Julius Caesar, about the Roman Emperor, had many things to say about this leader's characteristics.

"Caesar would be into contact sports like football," Jerry Sargent explained. "Romans were aggressive."

Jerry also pointed out that in the play, Caesar was the host of many banquets and would probably have his high school pals over for a big feast.

As for Caesar's looks and brains, well, he'd be a grunge guy with intelligence.

Jennifer Majeski, a student in Mrs. Matthys' sixth hour Literature class said, "He'd be an advanced placement student, who'd participate in Quiz Bowl...a really smart guy."

This play made students believe that Caesar would listen to classical music. "It seems to fit his personality," noted Rachelle Kuzera.

Lastly, he'd be a great government student...no explanation needed.

Students Jennifer Majeski, Donald Burgett, Ryan Barney, and Erica Krzywiecki work diligently on their Julius Caesar analysis.

Participating in class discussions helps students Maghann McDonald and her classmates Joe Ferlito and Sarah Rock understand Cassius' motives.

SHARPENING their SKILLS

Hands-on classes prepare teenagers for their future and Art, Computer Literacy, and Woodshop give students these opportunities.

Karn Patterson said that she took Art I for personal reasons. "I wanted to have a better taste for the artistic surroundings in the world," she commented.

Classes using computers give students tangible skills for architecture or keyboarding.

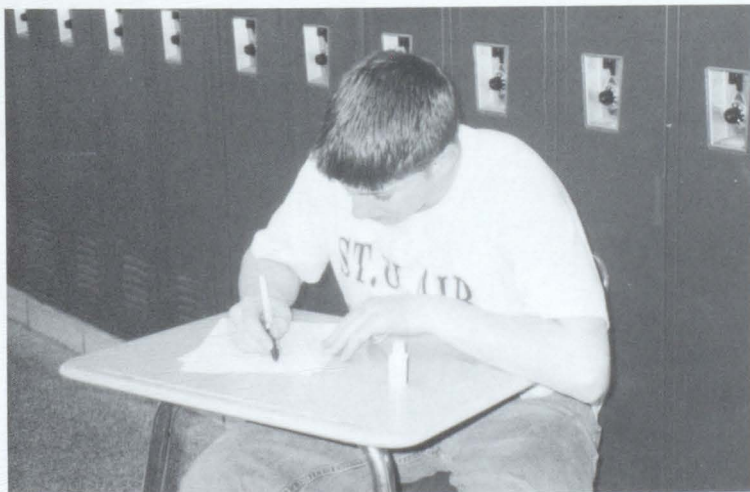

Working with computers has made Renee Brown, Nicole Riedel, and Bonnie Kalmar comfortable with computers.

Woodshop, which is in its last year as a class, offers students a chance to create useful products for friends and family, as well as for themselves.

Chad Westrick, who recently completed a bookshelf for his father, stated that "Woodshop has become an excellent stress reliever for me."

Many other students enjoy hands-on classes for the same reasons as Chad.

Computer expert Renee Brown, helps Nicole Riedel during class.

Geometry takes on a new shape as John Bailey builds a snowman for class.

FITNESS FUN in GYM

Freshmen gym class may be a graduation requirement, but it shouldn't be an excuse not to have fun. During the fall season the freshmen play volleyball, football, and soccer.

Catherine Riley thinks gym class is fun. "Once we get involved in a game, we get a lot of playing time," said Catherine.

After running four laps around the track, Kristy Basney, Jodi Lusko, Becca Funkhauser and Angela Lucht take a quick rest before they continue with other track and field events.

Getting warmed up for gym class is something Julie Adamson takes seriously. On the other hand, Joel Coulthard, Rob Woytta, and Tristan Sayers just watch.

FRESHMEN fitting IN

Scared, nervous, and out-of-place are a few words that some freshmen used to describe themselves on the first day of school.

Jessica Homberg stated "I didn't know any of the teachers or where the rooms were located." Many freshmen said they felt like their first day was spent wandering the halls looking for their classes.

Like many of her classmates, Heather Shaft's favorite part of high school is lunch. Many freshmen agree that now that they're in high school, they have a lot more freedom, not to mention responsibility.

Getting used to the high school routine was no problem for Thomas McCartan. "After a while, the upper classmen lightened up and the class work became easier to handle."

Once the classwork is out of the way though, the freshmen seem to have no trouble finding activities and organizations to fill their time.

Scott Brown, first year member of Business Professionals of America, models winter fashions.

Erin Hill, improves her typing speed and accuracy in keyboarding.

During band class, Erin Bowen diligently practices her baritone sax for MSBOA concert competition.

Making Minutes Count

showers, coffee and conversation

top students' morning routines

Master-Craftsman Joe Agbay smooths out the surface of his project using a belt sander, for Woodshop.

Getting up to go to school in the morning doesn't seem very rewarding. After all, it's school! Some students though, find reason and reward for their morning hustle.

Kevin Keeley, an early riser, explained "I get to school at 7:15, basically to complete my homework, and talk to friends."

Another early riser, Tara Bernard, comes to school before other students so that she can get a "decent parking spot."

Tara added, "everyday before school, I get a bottle of pop to avoid the lunchtime rush and quench my on going thirst." Over the school year, that's a lot of minutes with pop!

After the first bell rings, students hustle and scurry to make it to first hour. The longest hour of the school day, by five minutes, is first hour, which is the most unpopular hour because of its time.

Embracing this early schedule of first hour is easier faced with a cup of coffee. With her coffee in hand, Melanie Campbell is ready to face her morning schedule.

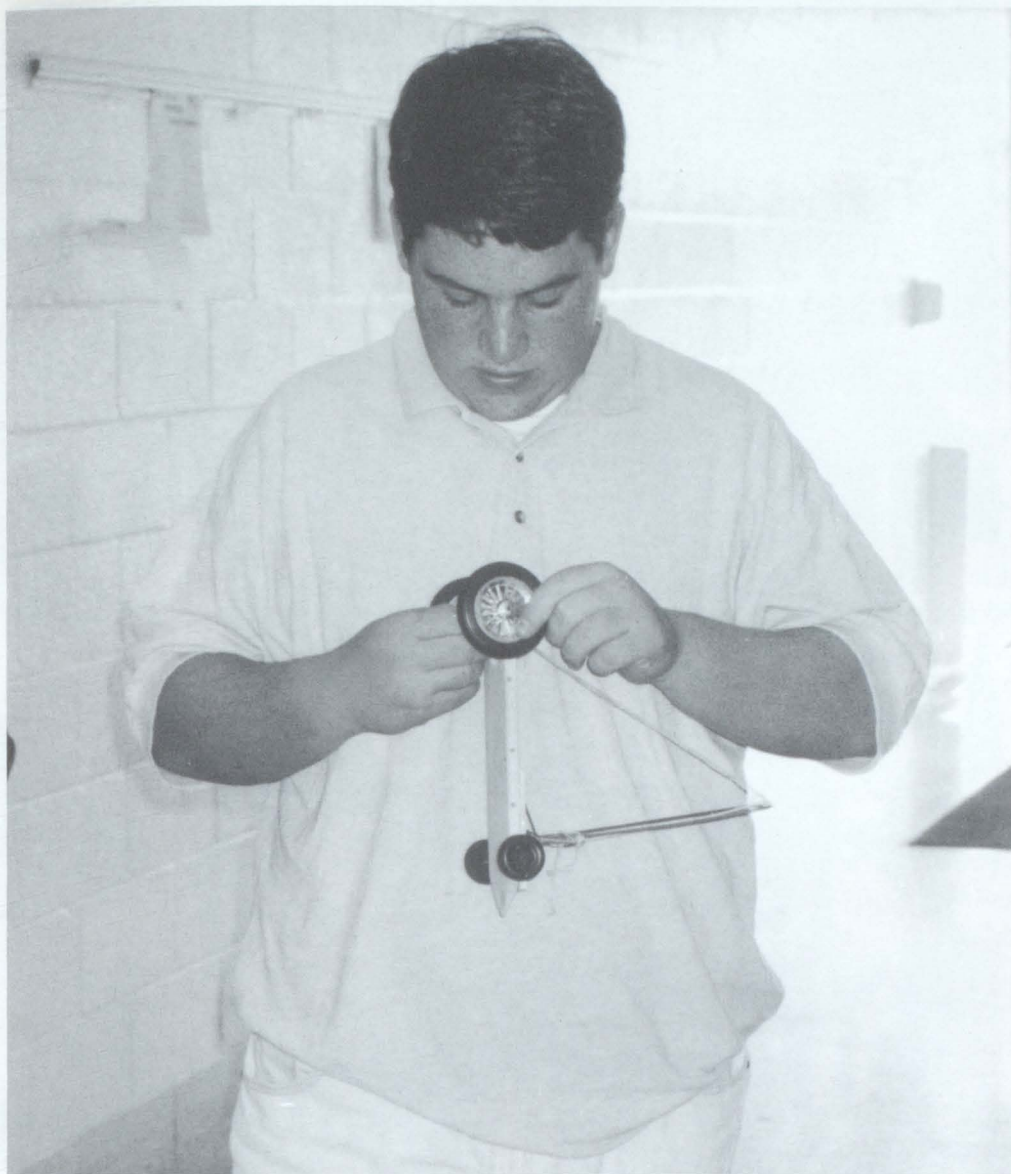

While most students find it difficult to stay awake first hour, second hour seem to move quickly. Tabatha Shafran's hour goes by quickly by making copies, putting up bulletin boards for teachers.

Lurking around the corner after third hour is lunch. Advanced Art student Amy Barrons smiled and said, "It's hard to think of work with food on my mind!" Others like Amy find lunch time a welcome break during the day.

Amanda Mercier With help from his carefully studies her friends, Tom Johnson tangram problems, in tries to win the mock gender battle by lifting first hour. more wieghts than the ladies in English II.

Concentration at its best! Joe Schwehofer places the final touch on his mouse trap vehicle for Research and Development class.

A.J. Gill and Andrea LaCasse read Catcher in the Rye in the library's lobby in third hour English class.

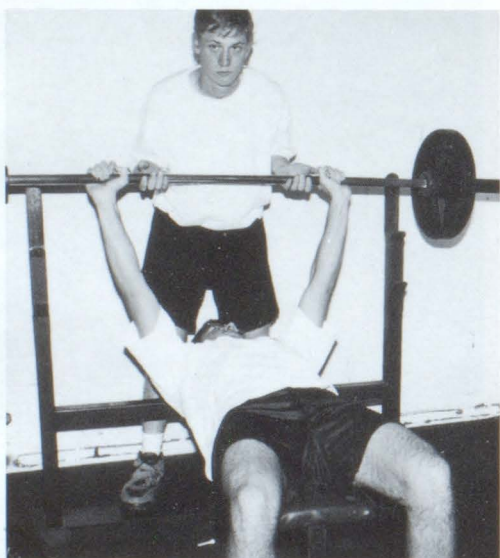

Faithful friend, Andy Gunn helps Kelly Hunt compute the latest data for Mr. Genny Wrockledge with her marketing application class in third hour.

Freshman Erica Charron browses for her favorite book in the computerized card catalog.

Scientist Eric Decker carefully measures out a portion of yeast for his Chemistry experiment.

Tough-guy Matt Holodnick receives a much needed spot from Forrest Dunkel.

Katie Atherton views Halloween from a different level in her Parenthood and Child Development class.

Sitch In Time Saves Nine

students challenge the clock during afternoon classes

Soon after lunch, the halls fill with students returning from off-campus lunch adventures.

A big line of students form outside the school store. Nick Campbell hurries to satisfy his candy cravings. "Usually we get back from lunch at about 11:20, and I grab a pack of Certs and jaw a bit with friends before 4th hour," Nick commented.

After lunch, it's more sitting and notetaking, unless you're in gym class or dance. "Imagine 30 girls constantly moving to "Rhythm is a Dancer" and "Tone Loc," and that's dance," commented Tamara Pogue.

As the last hour of the day approaches, anticipation begins to build for the end of school. Many students begin thinking ahead to jobs or after school events.

Like most other classrooms, all eyes in sixth hour Health class are fixed on the clock. Health class, though, still teaches lessons in life that cannot be ignored.

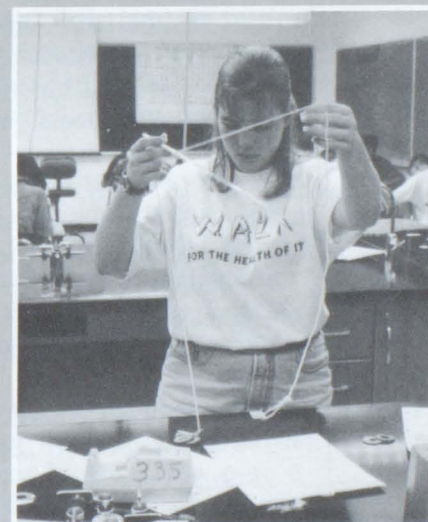

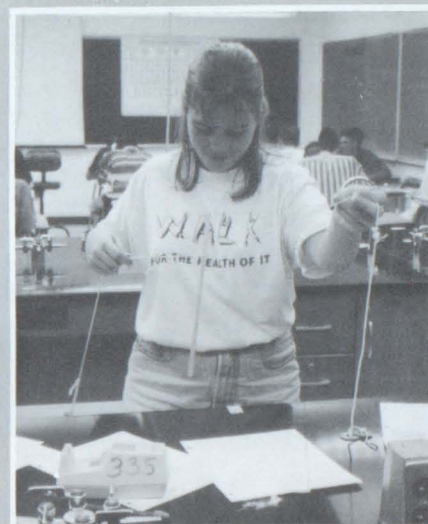

"I learned the correct way to give CPR, so someday I might save someone's life," Dave Zablocki explained.

Even after the final bell rings and the majority of students have dashed to their cars or buses to get home, there are those few students who stay after school. Debbie Schulte, a senior who co-ops for Mr. Miller, commented "I love working in the office! It has taught me a lot about completing projects and handling people."

Master typer Stephen Andrzejewski tries not to look at his fingers while in Keyboarding class.

Mr. Eberhard gives some one-on-one attention to Jen Rock and Amy Gutowski during Advanced Biology.

Junior Julie Watkins learns in a hands-on way about balance with the use of common household objects.

The Gundersons, whose first date was at a Sadie Hawkins dance, both broke dates with other people to attend as a couple. Mr. Gunderson subbed at SCHS during the month of February.

Mrs. Schunk and her husband, Duane, spent their first date attending a ZZ top and Rush concert. They have been happily married for 20 years.

Where did they go on their first date? What first attracted them to each other? Yes, teachers have romantic lives, too.

If anyone is curious about how long Mr. Rose has been married, he can tell you exactly how many years, days, and minutes since he said "I do," 22 years, 95 days, 15 minutes ago.

Fashion sense attracted Mr. Rose to his spouse, he said, "She looked wonderful in her white bellbottoms in the glow of a black light."

Mrs. Gunderson, who has been married for 32 years, was first attracted to her husband by his looks and athletic ability. The biggest difference between Mrs. G. and her husband is that he has no artistic talent.

Variety is what keeps a relationship interesting, according to many teachers. When asked if they would change anything about their spouse, their response involved MONEY!

"I'd like him to spend more money on me," wishes Ms. Osterland. Mrs. Badley was just the opposite, wanting her husband to save more money.

Mrs. Delaney pointed out that it would not be any fun to change anything about her husband, as "we would have nothing to disagree over anymore!" Regarding his spouse, Mr. McElreath said it best: "We balance out fairly well." It's like the old saying opposites do attract!

Skills That Pay the Bills

TEC students get a head start in careers

Senior Mark Brinker lays out a new design for a airplane, using a C.A.D program.

"Attending TEC will improve my plans for the future," commented junior Laura Horton.

Attending the Technical Educational Center, gives students a better chance of getting a job in a field that they were trained in. There are 4,500 employers who are ready and waiting to hire graduates of TEC.

The TEC center provides 30 different areas of training for students. Twelve of those areas are taught at TEC, and the rest of the areas are taught to students on the job.

Some of the most popular classes taken are those in the field of drafting. Mark Brinker, a first-year student in Computer-Aided-Drafting, chose this field because he wanted to learn more "about in depth details and become better with computers."

Besides providing its students with a reputable education, TEC offers courses that range from food services to air frame mechanics.

TEC is not the only way to obtain training for the future, Co-op programs also provide job opportunities to students as well.

"Co-op has taught me to deal with real life situations," commented senior Kevin Simonetta. "I can handle and communicate with people more effectively."

Chef Samara Kisielewicz thinks of a new recipe to wow the students with during the food service program.

Justin Trombley models a newly built frame of a bathroom wall.

Senior Stacy Carnahan works with a computer to get her Marketing finished.

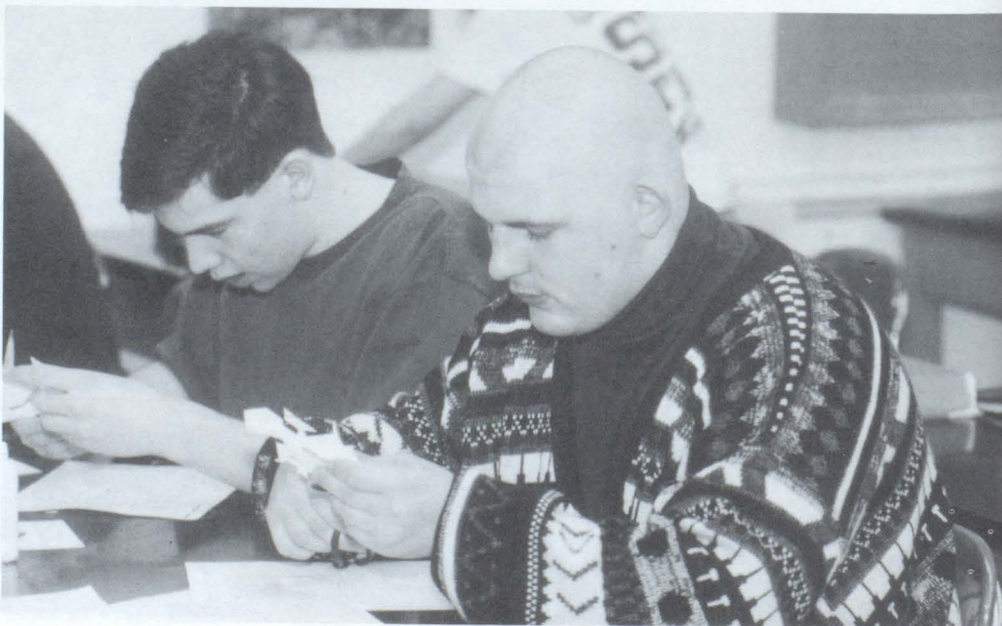

Senior Jason Benson listens to directions on how to hook up the electrical wiring.

Andra Manska looks for the next instructions of her C.A.D. work.

Anna Stanley and Chandra Hall takes Shawn Tyson scurry to finish their homework before class. Chandra Hall takes a minute to develop her sketching skills in her Art I class.

Sheila McGuire Trying to complete the task, Mike Ruckman and Tristan Sayers simulate molecules in Biology class.

W orking Hard For the Credit

students push themselves to achieve

Everybody likes to receive a pat on the back for a job well done. Some students work extra hard just to earn that praise.

"I don't ever really get any credit for the hard work I do, but I keep it up anyway," commented hard working senior, Angie Bennett.

What rewards are there for those students who continue to improve? "I work hard so I can be somebody when I get older, and be able to achieve my goals," Bridgette Walendzik remarked. Bridgette hopes to become a lawyer someday.

Personal drive is one motivator that keeps kids going, while others need some personal recognition.

"I get positive comments from my parents when I do well," Travis Lusko explained.

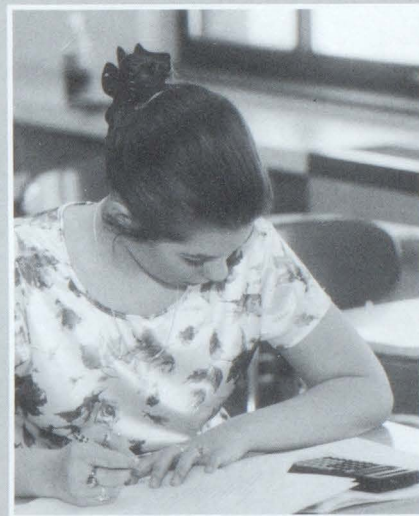

Teachers also acknowledge students' efforts. "If I do well on a project or show improvement in class, my teachers usually compliment me," Pat Parrish expressed.

Students also are rewarded with treats. Ms. Osterland rewards the class who has the highest test average with a pizza party. Free homework assignments and candy is how Mrs. Kandler rewards perfect test scores.

Freshman Mark Thoel sets a good example of how hard work pays off in class.

Personal satisfaction is what Stacy Willmott gets from her work in Calculus class, which is her best subject.

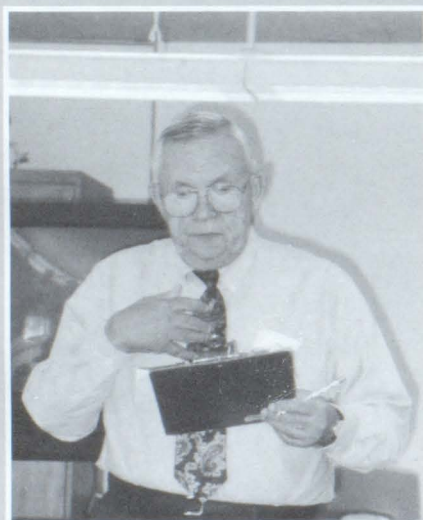

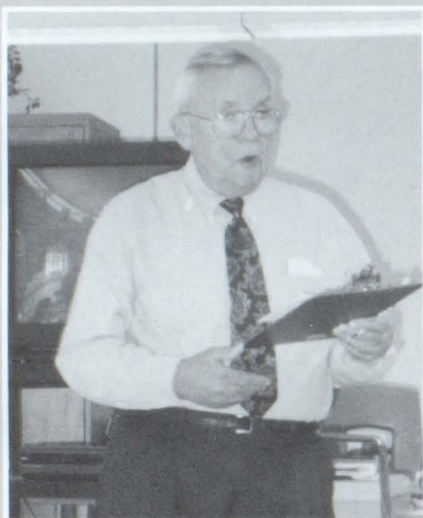

Jennifer Majeski puts in extra time at lunch to get help from Mr. D'Angelo with her Applied Math II.

ariety is the Spice of Life

subs, field trips, and guest speakers give students different ways of learning

Eccentric educator, Mr. Kramer explains to students the length of time before the next holiday.

The monotony of the classroom can send a student directly into dream-land. Good thing there are substitute teachers, field trips, and guest speakers to add some variety to the school day.

Substitute teachers have the difficult job coming into a class full of strange faces and unfamiliar lesson plans. As difficult as it is, some of these heroic people like their job.

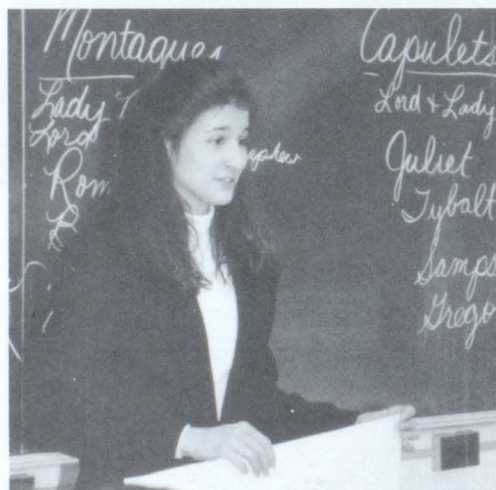

"I enjoy the classroom atmosphere, and I like to teach," substitute Julie Liva explained.

Student teachers also have to get used to unfamiliar faces and places. There were two student teachers at SCHS this year. "The staff and students were very supportive," noted Maria Kammer, who was a student teacher majoring in English.

Field trips also offer a change of pace. Parenthood/Child Development took a class trip to River District Hospital. "I thought it was interesting to see the delivery rooms and what the nurses do for mother and baby during the birthing process," commented Jamie Cunningham.

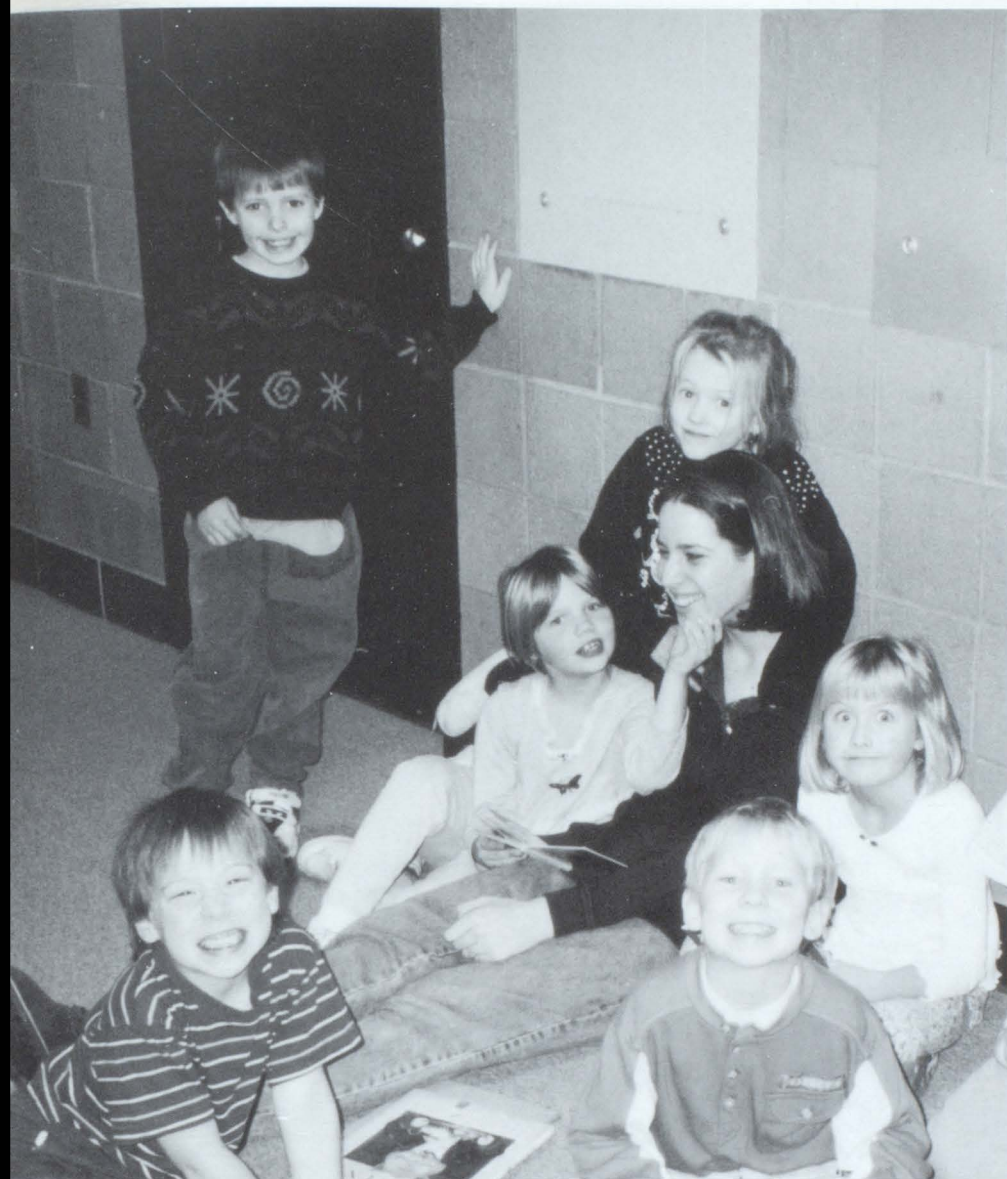

During the year, Government and Business Law classes had guest speakers on topics like financial planning and choosing the right college.

Student teacher Maria Kammer instructs her freshmen class on Shakespeare's play, Romeo and Juliet.

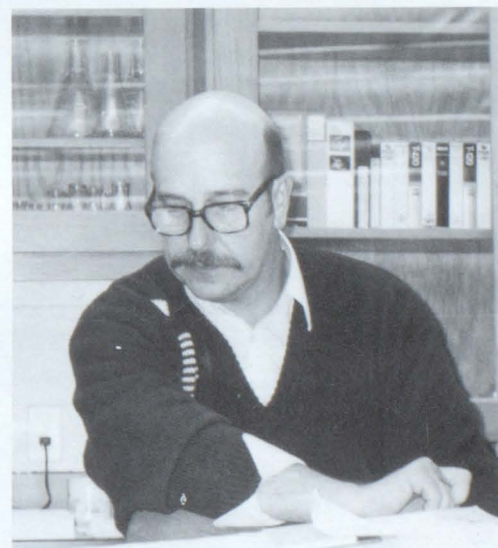

Conservation specialist Bruce Wojciek shows the Biology classes his red tailed hawk that was rescued from the wild.

Lovable Beth Brunhuber gets attention from children at Gearing Elementary while with the Parenthood class.

Temporarily taking the place of Mr. Holodnick, Mrs. Kerr teaches Chemistry students with a smile.

Fellow classmates look on as courageous Krystina Carsley handles a placenta at River District Hospital.

Substitute Mr. Sommerfield looks over the day's lesson plan for Mr. Tomlin's class.

PERFECTION. . .Business Professional of America gives interested students a head start in the business world. With competition in events like Business, Math, and Computer Programing, it readies students for some of the rigors of the business world. Six of St. Clair's team members placed well enough to travel to nationals, held during May in Phoenix, Arizona. Congratulations to: Jen Brown, Amanda Jones, Kurt LaFrance, Debbie Schulte, Amy Sheele, and Nicole Stephan.

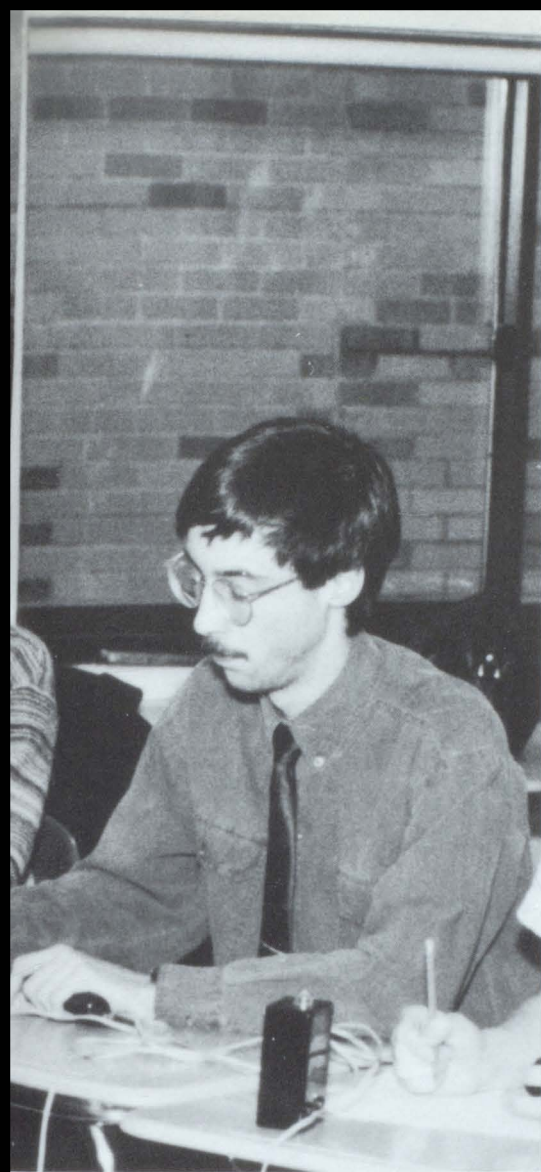

COMPETITION... With tough league opponents like Port Huron and Yale, how do St. Clair's athletes of the mind take the edge of the league's competitive nature? Arthur Gilbert, veteran team member, plays cards to relax before a match. Because of increased interest, two JV teams were formed in addition to the 10 member Varsity team. These crazy JV teams play hackey sack before, between, and after matches. Sophomore Anna Stanley remarked, "Although we have a variety a good luck charms, I think it's the hackey sacking that does us the most good." Lisa Kostiuk, junior, agreed. "Playing with the hackey before hand gets my brain going."

TRADITION... Through athletic sports participation in high school, students can earn their varsity letter in a variety of sports. Earning this letter gives a student the opportunity to join Varsity Club. The most important event by far is initiation week. Students wishing to join this club have to "participate in a week of activities," said Ben Kaufman, president of Varsity Club. During this week, new recruits perform a variety of humorous yet "sportsman-like" activities including singing in class and eating strange food for lunch. George Bremerkamp, junior, explained that dressing up wasn't so bad, that "it was the other stuff like acting crazy!"

Quiz Bowlers Tim McCulloch, Chil Kurily and Kurt LaFrance prepare for the next question.

Adam VanNuck and Dannett Slamka celebrate success during the state competition for BPOA.

Sophomores Jeani Westrick and Molly Holm endure a bad hair and makeup day. Just one of the many tortures of Varsity Club's initiation week.

Varsity Club hopeful, Brad Brickel flaunts his brand new tutu with leopard tights. The bowtie adds flair to an already flashy outfit.

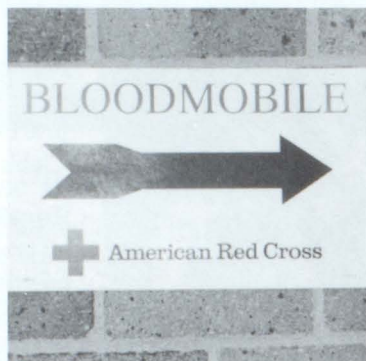

Anxiously awaiting the next question, Eric Decker and Jessica Homberg steady their buzzer thumb.

IMAGINATION... Keeping the student body involved and interested is Student Council's ultimate goal. The Student Council plans many activities for the student body. Freshman representative Adam May felt that Homecoming was Student Council's greatest achievement this year. "Leadership is important in Student Council because it teaches responsibility," commented sophomore Bridgett Jeroue. As leaders and role models, Student Council members have a tough job initiating school spirit. Their May event, "The Dream Run" was designed as a community service event with proceeds going to the Make a Wish Foundation.

MOTIVATION... National Honor Society is not just about getting good grades. These stellar students also learn leadership, teamwork and people skills. Jennifer Germain, explained, "I've learned to work well with others and to be a leader through my NHS involvement." This year, the NHS hosted a haunted house complete with a morgue and a hall of horrors. Through other efforts, NHS raised additional money for the United Way. To become a member of NHS, students must have good citizenship and maintain a grade point average of at least 3.4. Motivation is a key word among NHS members. Megan Treutle stated that her family and friends had big influences on her motivation to get good grades. As part of their process of revision and change, NHS also revised their constitution this year.

Weary NHS chico Dave Masterson is hoping the fiesta will end soon, so he can begin a long siesta.

Senior Nate McDonell rushes to finish the checked tunnel that was a main attraction at the NHS haunted house.

TEAMWORK. . .Hours of practice begin during summer band camp. Once school starts, it's practice during third hour class, and another two hours of practice on Wednesday nights. This is how the Marching Saints became a team of hard working musicians. All of this paid off when the Marching Saints received notice that they will be marching at Disney World in 1997! This past March, the band received a second division rating in the MSBOA District competition. Throughout the year, band attributed its success to working together to achieve good intonation. Erin Zimmerman commented, "It takes a lot of listening skills and cooperation to stay in tune."

CELEBRATION. . .Improving pitch became one area of focus for both Singers and Choir this year. "Singing takes a lot of hard work, especially around concert and festival time," noted Gerrad Foster. To add variety to their music program this year, students learned songs with international roots from countries like Portugal and Africa. Learning these songs not only involved a language barrier, but proficiency in sight reading as well. During the month of March, both Singers and Choir participated in the MSVMA district choral festival at Macomb County Community College. Proud of their work, Singers and Choir members returned home with a first division rating and a second division rating respectively.

Kevin Schneider, sophomore has to finish his work so he can attend the next SADD meeting.

Getting Organized!

ACTION... With elected president, Joy Selestky, living in Washington D.C. the first semester of the year, vice president Brad Harder was quickly thrown into the duties of SADD's president. Its annual events included two in-school campaigns to promote alcohol and accident awareness. To raise money, SADD sponsored the coat check at home basketball games. In the spring, SADD members took part in a training seminar at St. Clair ISD to learn new techniques that teach peer resistance. "Drinking and driving can mean the end to somebody's life," said Renee Morris. "And if we can convince someone not to do it, that's another life saved."

DEDICATION. . . "Deadlines, deadlines, deadlines," constantly rings in every yearbook reporter's brain. Continuous work on pages using picas and three computers makes putting the yearbook together challenging. Not only do students find work on page deadlines stressful, some found selling ads even less enjoyable. Newcomer Sara Crisenbery commented that "selling ads was not my forte." Another area where students learned to be more detailed was in their writing. Two-year Veteran Kelly Kennedy felt that, "Writing and designing on the computers can be a very tedious chore."

Yearbook veteran Randy Stark, labors over academic bodycopy

Working hard, these yearbook members draw layouts for ad pages.

EFFORT & endurance

This season was hard fought for the Varsity Football team.

The Saints began the season with back to back losses to Marysville and Richmond.

"In our game with Marysville, we had too many mistakes," explained assistant coach Bill Nesbitt. "We were determined to correct those mistakes and we did."

Improvements were evident during the Homecoming game against Algonac. "We stepped up to the challenge and really played as a team," said senior Eric McWain.

Teamwork was a focus for the Saints throughout the season. "Every game we played, we tried to work together to control the ball," said returning player Chris Westrick.

Overall, the Saints can credit their success to the help of returning players like Vince Minano and Chuck Tonne, and new talents like Tim Griffin and George Stockwell.

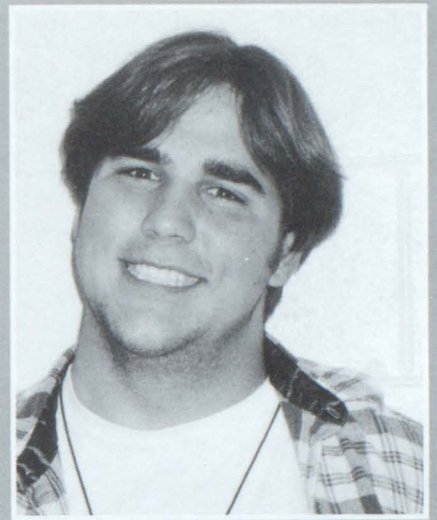

Tim Griffin, #14, quarterback, rushes to pass the ball to avoid the tackle.

George Stockwell and Chuck Tonne regroup and take the field during the Marine City game.

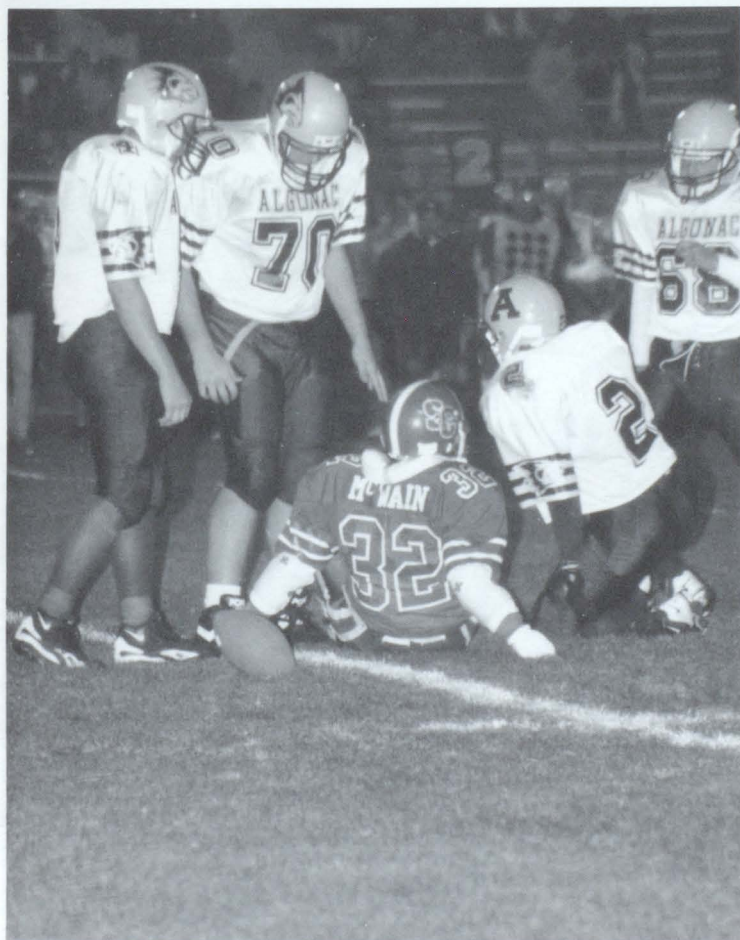

The Saints' defensive line, including J. Trombley, R. Kuzera, J. Mullins, M. Ruckman, R. Lyle, L. Foster, C. Green, J. Crisenbery and C. Westrick, ready themselves to hold the line against the Vikings.

"Playing football takes a lot of dedication and effort to be prepared each week."

Justin Trombley, junior

Teammates Ryan Lyle, Will Carson and Jeff Mullins, along with teammates, rally around Coach Scott Mitchell to review the play.

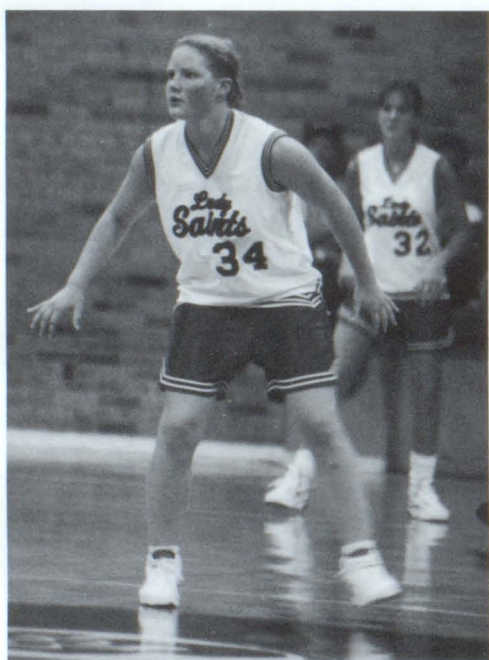

Full back Eric McWain recovers from Algonac's tackle. St. Clair successfully beat Algonac during our Homecoming game.

Wide receiver Brian Kerrigan looks for the pass while a Marysville Viking attempts the tackle.

"Once I get involved in something, I stick with it...I don't believe in quitting."

-Jill Blaskowski, junior

Ann Shaw and Terri Whittaker defend the basket.

Concentration helps Rebecca Goodsel aim her shot.

Amanda Wright, #20, waits for the turn around.

Jaime Kafcas takes a moment to rest between plays.

Dribbling fiend Jill Riedel makes her way down the court.

DRIVE

Continuing the tradition of success, the Varsity Lady Saints played one of their best seasons ever.

Making the state finals was the team's goal. Center Georgette Kollmorgen said that, "on the court, we have power and determination!"

Summer practices and basketball camps gave the team enough toughness to defeat arch rivals Imlay City and Marysville.

"I was so excited, ... we worked hard to beat Imlay City," replied guard Ann Shaw.

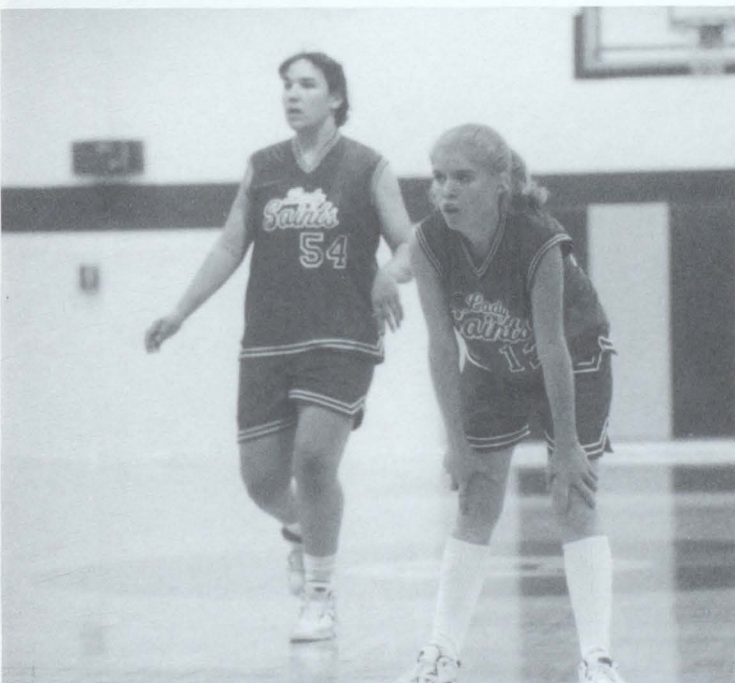

Co-captains Becki Browne, Rebecca Goodsel, Georgette

Kollmorgen and Jill Riedel, worked together to build team spirit.

Finishing their season with a 10-0 SCAL record, the Saints entered district play with confidence.

In the first round of play, the Saints defeated Yale. Sadly, they were defeated by Marysville in a close fought game by 53-48.

"We were really disappointed, everyone was," stated center Stephanie Salisbury. "We had hoped to win." To their credit though, five of the girls were named to the all-area team.

Nicki Westrick and Stephanie Salisbury wait for the opportunity to steal the ball.

Becki Browne rests while Georgette Kollmorgen takes her position.

With 15,000 laps under their swimming caps, the Girls' Varsity Swim Team finished off the season with a splash!

Beginning the season with a big win against Cranbrook, the Saints were in good shape, and continued to shut out SCAL rivals Marine City and Marysville.

With only two returning seniors Gale Govaere and Crystal Jo Karas, Coach Carol Lucht said that "the team worked very well developing its new talents."

Good performances by Angela Lucht, Sarah Gotautas and Crystal Jo Karas, as well as Renee Tylen gleened the team its 8-3 season record.

Many of the swimmers, set personal goals for themselves this year. Mary Buckland, who swam at state competition in the medley relay, had a season goal of "making it on the school record board."

Unity and hard work helped send four of its swimmers to state finals at Eastern Michigan University.

Freshman Megan Rose prepares for a clean dive into the water.

Pushing herself to claim a neat finish, Alice Schwehofer reaches for the wall to complete her event.

MERIT

The "sultans of swing" gained a reputation as confident golfers early in the season this year. In addition, the Saints clinched the SCAL title and sent golfers Steve Pillon, Craig Howard, Kevin Kerbrat and Dan Osterland to state finals.

"They all worked very hard to finish the season with success," commented Coach Tony Monte.

The 14-man team set its expectations high this year, hoping to anchor a championship.

These high expectations turned into pressure for the match against arch-rival Marine City, to whom St. Clair lost at the SCAL match.

Players often feel the pressure of meeting goals set before each match. Steve Pillon said, "Trying to shoot the lowest score possible to help out the team can be stressful."

QUALITY & quickness

Lowering individual times and beating last year's competition were two of the goals of the 1995 Cross Country team. Many individuals set personal goals to improve their times so that they could go to state competition.

Veteran runner Jamie Majeski accomplished her goal this season by "doing well enough at SCAL so that I would be able to run at the regional race."

This season, the boys' team finished third in SCAL. Top runners included Terry Burns, Kurt Brinker, and Jeff Dominick. These three dedicated runners pushed themselves all season with results that would make any runner proud.

The girls' team also finished strong this year. Finishing fourth in SCAL, team leaders included Rosalee Egan, Tracy Zobl, and Michelle Kreusel.

Regional competition in Holly was rough for both teams. The tough course and the cold weather made the 3.1 mile course seem unusually difficult.

Terry Burns, a hopeful for state finals, was eliminated by tough competition at the regional level.

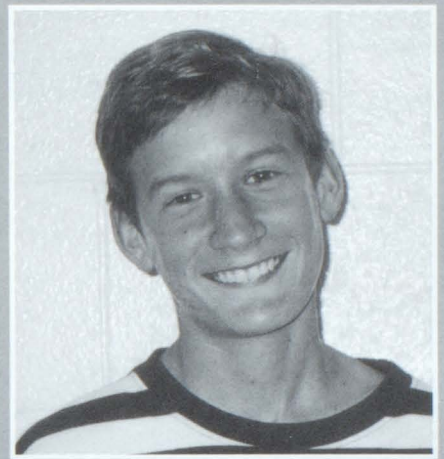

"Just keep running! It's easier than stopping and starting later...because later just keeps getting later."

-Angela Kreusel, senior

Megan Ford pushes herself at one of the more difficult courses- "the hill," Marine City's home course.

The girls' team of M. Ford, S. Schweihofer, J. Majeski, L. Sanders, S. Birch, A. Sheele, A. Carver, A. Kreusel, M. McCartan, B. Hall, M. Kreusel and R. Egan, anxiously wait for the shot gun.

"I don't let the pain get to me. I give everything until the end."

IDEAL

Capturing ten consecutive SCAL titles is no easy feat; but, the Girls' Varsity Tennis Team makes it look easy. These phenoms also placed second in regionals and catapulted into the state finals for the fourth straight year. Solid play by the entire team con0d to their notable season.

"I enjoyed playing this season, because it's been so competitive," cited number one singles player Megan Maniaci.

The competition made the Lady Saints set lofty goals. Nikki Stephan commented, "This year our main goal was to win regionals, make the state finals and beat Mt.

Clemens." Although they made it to state finals, they didn't have the chance to make good on their final goal.

Not only did the girls have a winning season, they also had fun. Sarah Rock remarked, "I look forward to playing after school everyday because I always have fun with my friends."

With only three players lost to graduation, the Lady Varsity Tennis Team should remain a powerhouse for the next few seasons. New talents like Lori Sanders, Kelly Maniaci and Molly Holm, give the team lots of promise for next year.

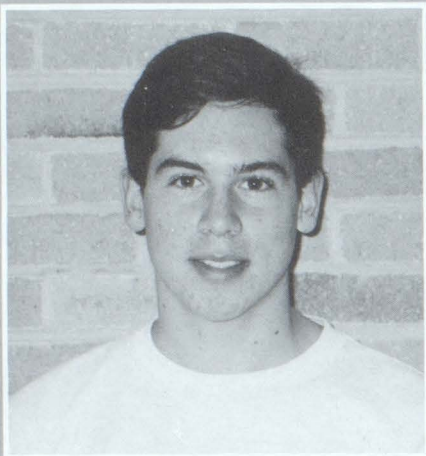

Senior Sharon Groff warms up before a match by returning a few quick volleys.

Sarah Acton, Sharon Groff and Mr. Stablein stand with the team as Jenny Brown congratulates her Imaly City opponent on a good match.

strength

The Freshmen Football Team had an exciting season this year, but not because they won their games. It was all the new experiences the team had that made their first year worthwhile.

Coach Bill McElreath said, "The team is willing to stick it out, they're not a team of quitters." And quitters they weren't. These freshmen not only learned their plays, but they perfected their techniques as well.

Small victories and improvements were apparent throughout the season. Shutting out Algonac in the second half of the game was a result of their hard work. "Not bad for our first year," commented Adam May.

Another coup came in the Marysville game, when St. Clair scored the first touchdown.

Because of their continual improvement throughout the season, these freshmen should be ready and willing to meet the challenges of the 1996 football season at the Junior Varsity Level.

Justin Cardella gets tackled by a Marysville player while trying to pass the ball to Dave Charest.

Freshman Steve Vogel kicks off to the opponent on the Saints' home field.

FIESTY

Victory came early for the JV Football Team. Winning against Marysville by a score of 22-20, gave the team a feeling of accomplishment.

During the first quarter, the Saints played well offensively against the Marysville Vikings. By halftime, the Saints led by a score of 22-6.

"We played very well overall and didn't let up in the second half," admitted tackle Archie Kollmorgen. In the second half, Marysville added 14 more points to the board making the final score 22-20.

Coach Pete Fox was pleased with his team's efforts. "We emphasized team, not individuals. Who carries or catches the ball is irrelevant because without blocking, nothing would happen."

The remainder of the season was successful for the JV Saints, with their most disappointing loss happening in the Imlay City game. These tough games though, will help prepare the JV Saints for the move to the MAC conference.

Split end Dave Schutter said, "The non-conference teams are more of a challenge, and we will be playing them next year when we join the MAC."

Overall, the team believed that the season was successful because they played hard and tried their best.

"Coach Fox pushes us to do our best. We help and push each other, so it feels great when we win."

Jump, pass, dribble, shoot!! The Freshmen Girls' Basketball team displayed great teamwork on the court this year. Cooperation and communication were vital for these girls.

On the court, the players utilized "floor talk" to keep the game moving and boost player confidence.

During these season, these teammates learned more than just skills. They learned how to operate as a unit rather than as individuals. Michigan State University's basketball camp helped teach the girls new techniques and improve court aggressiveness.

Guard Kara McWain learned a lot from her experience at MSU, and explained that "Camp taught us to work as a team and strengthen our weak points."

Balance has been the key to keeping the J.V. Lady Saints alive in the '95 season.

"We work together really well as a team," stated freshman guard Sarah DiGiusto. The team has worked hard to balance offensive and defensive strategies against some pretty tough competition.

The Saints faced one of their strongest opponents, Bishop Foley, early in the season.

The Saints lost their battle by a score of 31-50. This loss helped them prepare for the tough SCAL competition.

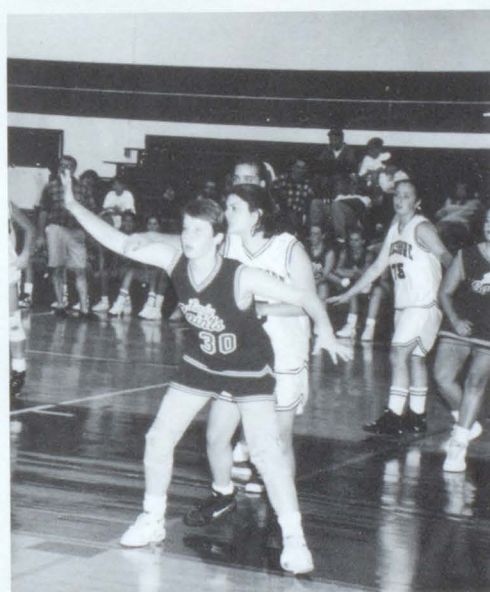

"Imlay City will be our toughest opponent because they have strong returning players," commented Coach Dave Becker.

As Kari Roebke said, "It's great to play a good game, especially when the crowd is there to cheer us on."

"The competition keeps me going. I like the aggressiveness and having control of the ball."

Hard work and practice lead the way to improvement this year, for the St. Clair Cheerleaders. With 10 of the 16 cheerleaders, bringing previous experience and knowledge to the team, new and old members became unified.

Newcomer Jessica Dawson complimented the experienced cheerleaders for, "helping me gain confidence in myself."

Five-year veteran, Alicia Czewski, stayed extra hours to help new squad members learn routines.

Junior Varsity member Andrea Blythe commented that the "after-school help really improved my routines."

The team practiced two to three days during the week, learning new routines and stunts.

Long practice hours gave them a chance to be with friends. Amber Sikor stated, "My favorite thing about cheerleading is how we spend time together as a team both in and out of school."

LEAN & laborious

Dedication is what holds the ten girls on the SCHS Varsity Volleyball team together.

Sophomore Elaina Hall, who knows everything there is to know about dedication, has been playing volleyball for four years. Even though Elaina is definitely dedicated to the game, she said that "the seniors, because of their experience, are the anchors for our team."

The team is composed mostly of experienced underclassmen. Because of this experience, new players found it easy to join the organization.

Many goals were set at the beginning of the season, such as winning 40 matches, and beating arch-rival Marysville.

Lori Schoeneweg, junior, stated that "Marysville is a good team that usually wins SCAL and districts." Unfortunately, the Saints were unable to conquer the SCAL title over Marysville.

Bumping up the ball, Anna Johnson helps the team make a play.

Sara Lindsay dives on the floor trying to save a return.

Amanda Wright passes the ball while teammate Krista Sabatos covers her.

"Our strategy is: we always work as a team, play smart, and look for holes in the defense."

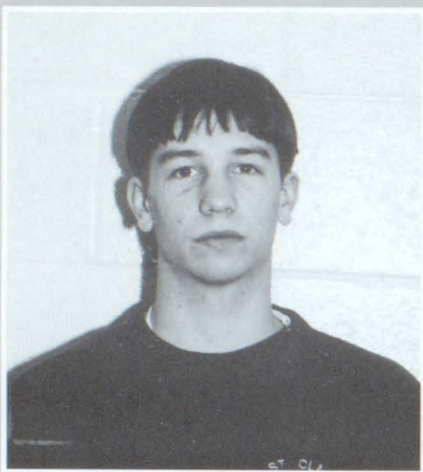

-Sara Lindsay, junior

Waiting to receive a pass, Rebecca Goodsel watches her teammate Georgette Kollmorgen bump the ball.

Senior Krista Sabatos positions herself for a nice, easy pass up to the setter.

Showing perfect form, sophomore Nicole Stephan sets the ball for a teammate to spike.

"By winning we gain respect... that is an indescribable feeling."

-Nate Larch, senior

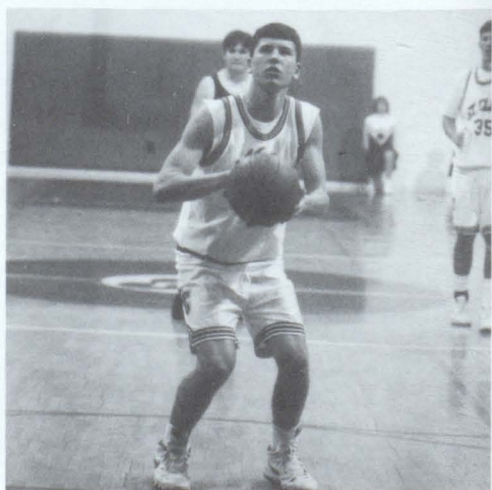

Tim Larson weaves his way to the basket on the Saints home court.

Hands high, hearts soar, as the varsity team unifies itself for victory.

By dodging a swarm of Marysville players, Ron Kotecki aims to net two for the Saints.

Glenn Barnum readies himself to pass the ball to a teammate in the open.

Concentration is the key to Matt Stein's free throw.

rapacious & READY

Experience, time and talent seemed to be on their side. When the Varsity Saints took to the court this season, every game was a celebration.

"We have a lot of talent on the court," said forward Luke Dowd. "We want to play at the Breslin Center."

With experienced players like Tim Larson, Glenn Barnum and Ron Kotecki, this seemed like the possible dream. The wins piled up for the Saints, making a SCAL championship seem within their reach.

When the Saints met the Marysville Vikings, the hoopsters pulled out a tight victory, winning 58-56.

"Because we lack the height of some of the other teams, we had to play a stronger defense," commented shooting guard Chris Mollan.

Although the Saints finished the season with a 4-6 record in the SCAL, and the dream of the Breslin Center was still very much alive.

Going into the first round of districts, the mighty Saints controlled the game against Crosswell and won, 63-56.

In the second round of districts, the Saints were matched with powerhouse Marine City. The Saints credit their "amoeba defense" with the 47-42 win.

At regionals the Saints were downed 50-35 by Flint Beecher.

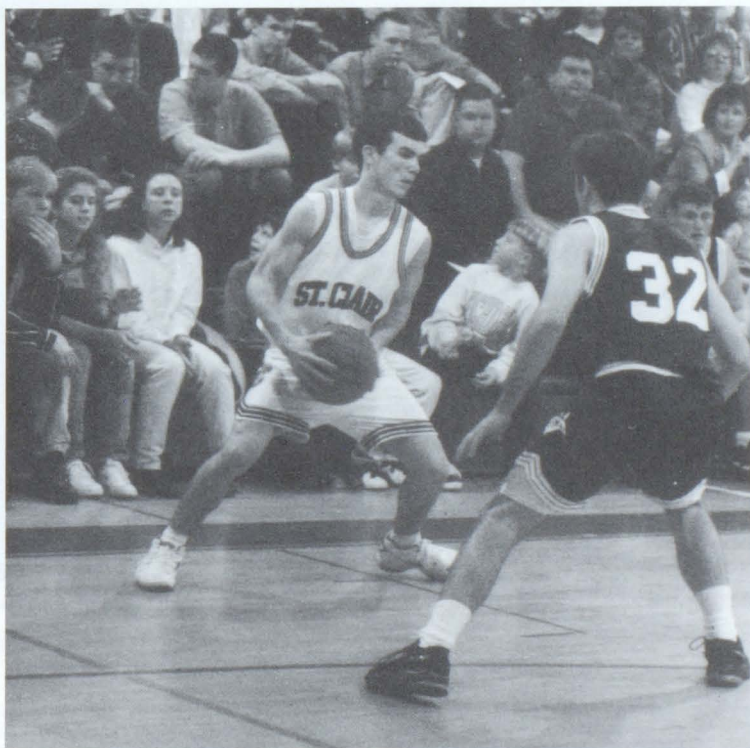

With returning players like Kotecki, Larson and Matt Stein, the Saints look good for '97.

Joe Calnan's hustle prevents a Marysville player from making the shot.

Ball carrier Shawn Grice dribbles down the court, with Nate Larch close behind.

Blocked by Marysville's #32, Eric Beck looks for an opening.

skillful

1996 proved to be a successful season for the Varsity Saints. After last year's discouraging season, the Saints have managed to revive their winning streak which brought them six consecutive SCAL victories in the past.

Tim Closs, a senior and returning team member, stated that "as the years have gone on, I've gotten stronger and my times have dropped greatly." Tim swims the backstroke and won the SCAL title in that event.

Most of the team said that their biggest goal was to win

SCAL, which they did.

Some members had personal goals that they also wanted to meet. Paul Lindsay, a sophomore, commented that he wanted to "try and beat the record for the breaststroke."

Teammate Craig Foulon also wants to improve. After being on the team for only two years, Craig has knocked five seconds off his best time. Rookie swimmer Alan Bremerkamp quickly admitted that, "It takes a lot of hard work to swim well, but in the end, it's worth it."

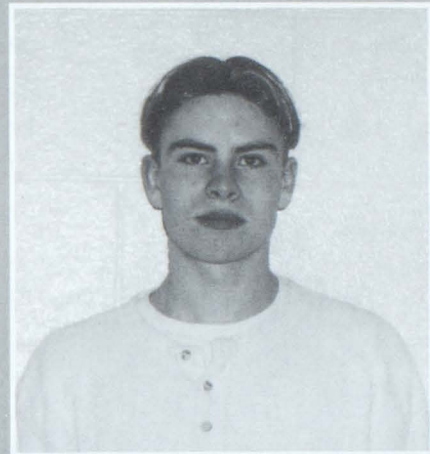

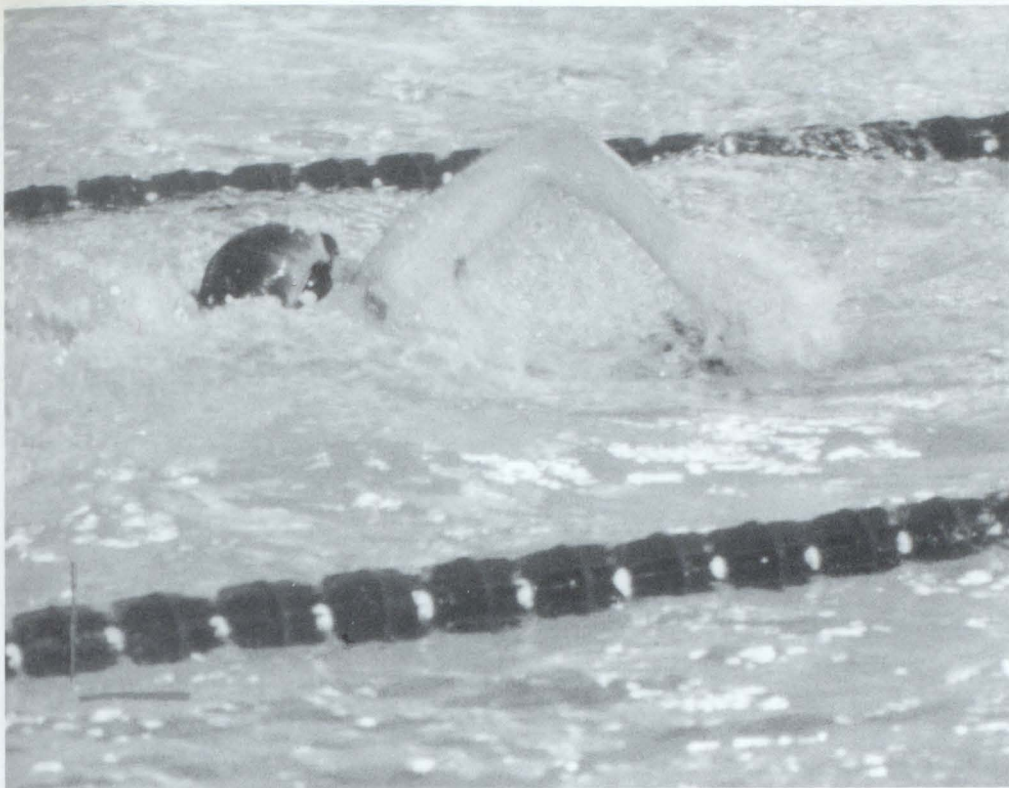

With ease, backstroke swimmer Brian Closs pushes himself as he reaches the home stretch.

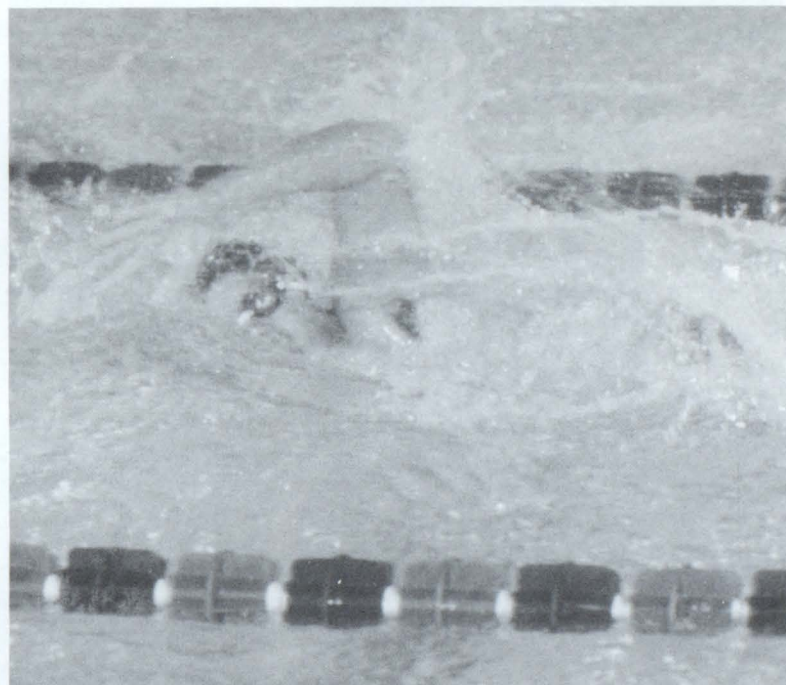

Flying down the lane, Craig Foulon hopes to swim another victory for the Saints.

Paul Lindsay skillfully zips through the freestyle race.

"We always work together as a team and push each other to be the best."

-Ryan Swoish, senior

Coming up for air, Tim Closs breezes through the freestyle race.

At the signal, Ben Kaufman dives off the board at the start off another race.

Nick Schindler, sophomore, works hard to overcome his opponent at a Saints home meet.

"Since the beginning of 9ng its game."

-Darcee Askew, freshman

GUTSY & glorious

On fire with determination, the Freshmen Volleyball team worked hard this year to prepare themselves for their SCAL meets.

As first year players, the team set some attainable goals for themselves: to work efficiently as a team, and to improve their hitting, bumping, and serving skills.

Key players like Jenny Pauli, Carissa Emerich and Stefanie Swierkosz kept these freshmen phenoms on top of their game during the season.

"Everyone knows that Marysville is the team to beat in volleyball," explained Stephanie. "We did beat them during one game, which was good for our moral."

During the season, this team worked hard to keep their spirits high. Optimism and enthusiasm, as well as talent will bring them success on the JV level next year.

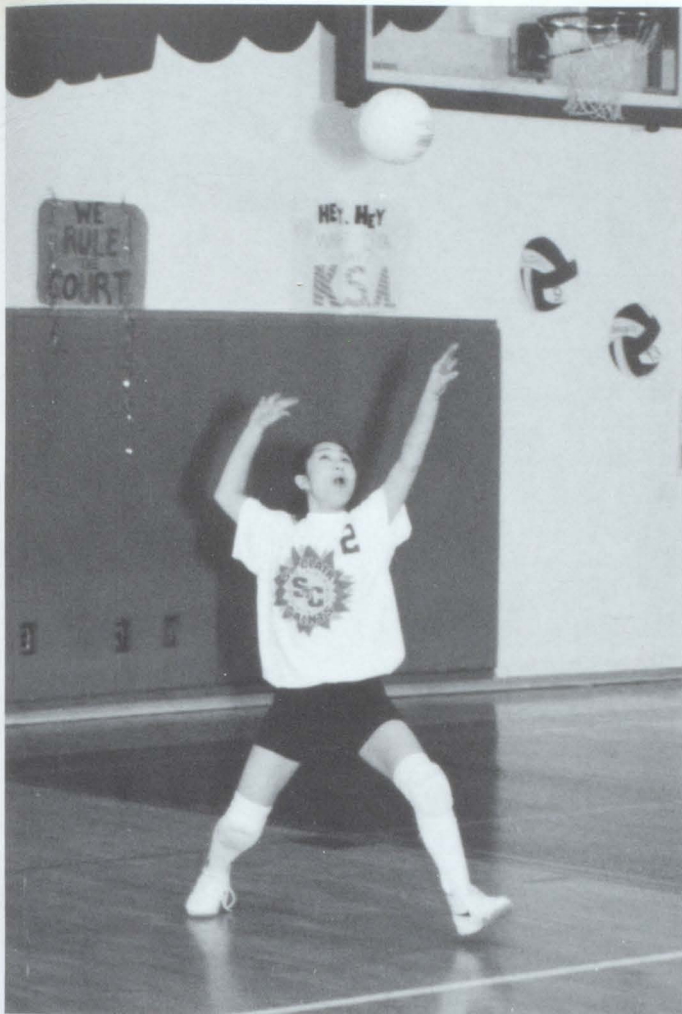

With ease and skill, Jenny Schulte bumps the ball back to the opponent.

Using great determination, Carissa Emerich serves the ball and prays for an easy point.

accurate & ACTIVE

Working on dives, net returns and attending camp prepared the JV Volleyball team for its tough 1996 season.

Like her teammates, Katie Atherton participated in the two-week camp at SCHS. "I improved my serving, passing and hitting at camp," she explained.

This camp and others like it prepared the Lady Saints for tough competition. Again, Marysville was the team to crush. The girls worked hard all season to get ready for this arch rival. Freshman Clara Berridge commented, "We always encourage each other and this game we did even more so," she explained.

Losing to Marysville, 15-7 and 15-1 was heart breaking for the Saints.

Lisa Melczarczyk explained that "beating them as freshmen made our split with them this year disappointing."

Despite this disappointment, these JV Saints have a lot on the ball for '97.

"We try to concentrate on our ultimate goal, which is to win."

-Tina Brunhuber, sophomore

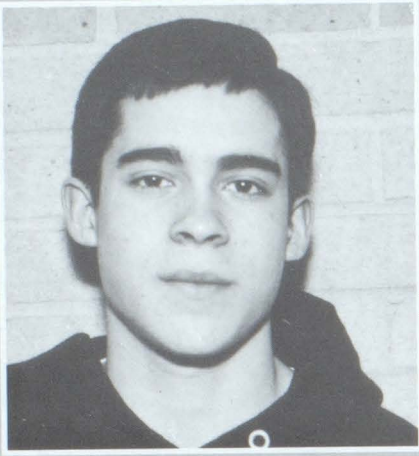

With confidence, sophomore, Lindsay Mastry gets in position to serve the ball.

Erika Gill serves the ball in hopes of scoring another point for St. Clair.

What a save! Lisa Melczarczyk sends the ball flying to the court behind her.

"Quickness is an asset for our team, it helps us get a lot of easy baskets."

-Dylan Estrada, freshman

Ending the season with a fairly even record, the freshmen basketball team has put some experience under their belt. "This year of basketball has been really fun," commented Justin Cardella.

The season was not all fun and games. It was also filled with many goals that needed to be accomplished. One goal was to win ten games during the season.

Mike Schutter explained that another one of their goals was "to get eight offensive rebounds a game."

This was a tough goal to fulfill because of teams like Algonac, who won SCAL, and Imlay City.

The team worked hard to better themselves with long practices and hard work, according to the team, the sacrifice was worth it.

Mike Shutter drives down the court, past the opposing player for the basket.

Forward T.J. Watkins throws the ball over the head of a Marine City player, to a make pass.

commitment

& COURAGE

A love of the game led the JV basketball team to victory throughout the 1995-96 season.

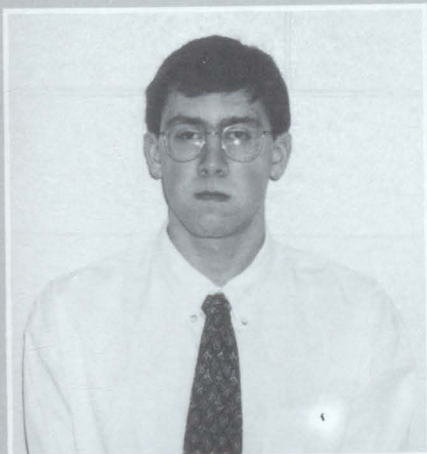

Having a good time while practicing seemed quite natural for this team. "All of us are friends, so we work well together," said forward Chad Westrick.

Some of the team's goals for the season included: winning the SCAL title, playing better defense, and scoring a lot of points.

And points they did score. The JV team was 0-5 on the road, with Imlay City being its toughest SCAL challenge. St. Clair, Imlay City, Marine City, and Marysville all tied for first place in SCAL.

Throughout the season the team continued to work on unity. Steve Freeland said, "If we don't have teamwork, then we don't have a team."

"Good strategy and discipline are an important part of the team's defense."

-Matt Holodnick, junior

Guard Dave Schutter, drives towards the basket to make his shot.

Aaron Ross holds back a Richmond opponent to make a path to the basket.

Steering his way through his opponents, Michael Zimmer tries to find his shot.

ZIPPY & zealous

This year's Varsity Softball team headed onto the field loaded with youthful talent and a lot of experience.

The team has shown that they play their best as a team when the competition is tough. "We get along great and work well as a team, but we do have our up and down days," commented center fielder Amanda Wright.

Going into their biggest game against tough rival

Richmond they were filled with high expectations and positive attitudes.

Coming into the 6th inning the Saints were ahead 5-4. "It seems that our team always has at least one bad inning," observed pitcher Christine Emerich. "The 6th was ours for this game." The final score ended at 10-5 favoring Richmond.

C a r r i e Releasing the ball in perfect form, Christine Emerich keeps her concentration.

V e t e r a n , Erica Barrons readies herself to catch a grounder.

"Having played softball in the past has helped to make me a better player today."

-Kris Vincent, junior

Hitting a powerful blow to the ball, Renee Brown, follows through with her swing.

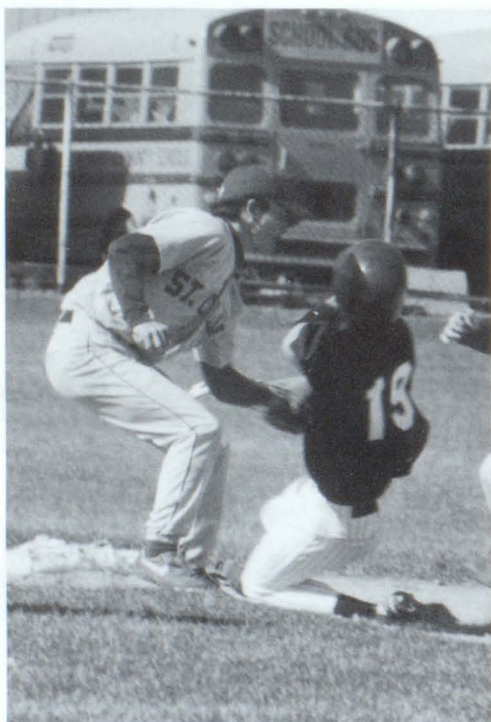

Erika Gonzales disappointedly watches the ball fall at her feet.

Senior, Georgette Kollmoren throws a line drive to help her team.

"Hard work and dedication improves our team's playing ability."

-Dan Osterland, senior

Joe Calnan makes a successful play by tagging out a Marysville player.

Keeping his eye on the ball, Ryan VanBuskirk swings at an incoming pitch.

Pouring on the speed, Chris Westrick makes the dash for third base.

Relaxed and ready for the pitch, Chris Mollan waits for the ball.

perfection & PRIDE

This year's Varsity Baseball team ran onto the diamond with a desire to win it all.

The team got off to a rocky start, though, losing the first few games by just one run.

George Stockwell commented, "We had to concentrate and turn our mental game around and begin to win."

An exciting win against Marine City help put the team back on the road to victory.

"When we beat Marine City, we realized it took the whole team to win, not just one person," said pitcher Jeff Tackaberry.

After this, it looked like the only thing holding these players back was the weather.

"Some weeks we had a game every day," stated Dan Osterland. "The rain wreaked havoc on our games."

Fortunately, the skies cleared in time for districts. The Saints won their first district game in a five-inning 12-0 mercy against Richmond.

Jeff Lukasak, pitcher for this year, predicted, "We'll make it to regionals if we play as well as we did here."

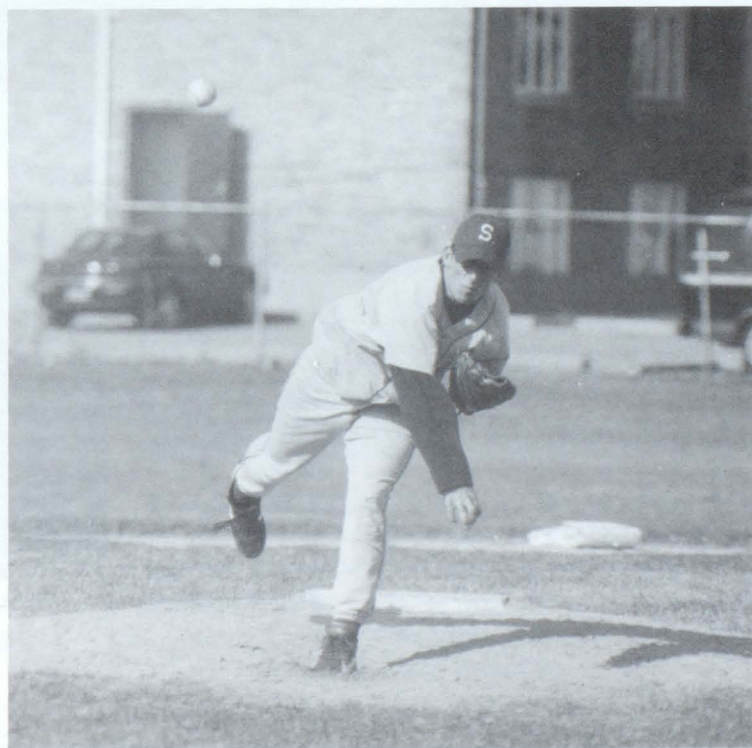

Playing well was not in the forecast for the Saints, however. The Saints lost to Algonac, 4-1 in the second game of districts.

Jeff Lukasak hassles the batter by chanting "Hey, batter, batter, swing, batter, batter."

Pitcher Ron Kotecki hopes to strike out the next three batters to chalk up another Saints victory.

Josh Kreger winds up for the perfect pitch that will strike out the batter, bringing the Saints up to bat.

AGILE & amazing

Although this year's girls track team is young and has few experienced members, they have fierce determination.

First year runner Jami Strickler said, "This season I hope to do the best that I can and have fun."

Most of this year's members are concerned with the state of their team. Carolyn Domiczek explained, "One of the weaknesses this year is transportation. The bus always seems to be packed."

The girls track team is also very enthusiastic about their strengths. Jessica Krul, sophomore stated, "Our team is very supportive of each other, it helps to know that someone is there to cheer you on."

When asked about their toughest opponent, Michelle Prater indicated, "My toughest opponent is myself. I try to beat my best times at every track meet."

Vicki Kerszykowski takes a flying leap over the hurdle. Maura McCartan leads teammates Michelle Kreusel and Rose Egan in a strenuous race. Saints runners in the lead at the start of the race against Richmond.

"Without perserverance
we gain nothing."

-Bree Campbell, junior

Pushing herself to the limit, Renee Tylen clears the bar with barely an inch to spare.

Jennifer Flemming makes a mighty effort to throw 81' 8 1/4" in a meet against Richmond.

Using all of her energy Abby Holodnick strides toward the finish line.

"Adrenaline is the heart of speed."

-Jeremy Mansell, sophomore

Junior Terry Burns stays focused as he goes into the turn.

Hrant Hratchian, who hopes to run the Boston Marathon one day, leads his teammates in the mile.

With fierce determination, Will Carson soars hoping to gain footage in the long jump.

John Stockwell concentrates on the difficult process of vaulting himself over the towering pole.

greatness GRIT

The Boys' Varsity Track team literally runs on its athletes' diverse talents.

With most of the team members playing more than one sport in school, track serves many purposes besides winning.

Rob Christoff, sophomore, admitted, "I run to keep in shape for hockey." Not all of the track and field men rely on fitness for their motivation.

Hrant Hratchian appreciates the presence of a coach. "He keeps us inspired."

Coach Pete Fox had quite a job this season keeping his 40-member team inspired.

Although the team didn't miss any SCAL meets due to rain, their season was hampered by what SCAL coaches called, "the coldest weather in 15 years."

Another reason the Saints needed to be inspired was that the Saints had to schedule all of their home meets AWAY! Talk about playing to a tough crowd.

Shot putter Eric McWain said, "It was frustrating to have meets away all the time. The traveling got to us, and we could have potentially done better without it."

While his fellow teammates look on, Chris Browning heaves the shot put into the air.

Cooperation helps Eric McWain as he hands off the baton to John Hoover.

Todd Maitland flies over the hurdles in front of a Port Huron opponent.

TALENT & toughness

This year marked the fifth consecutive undefeated SCAL season for the Saints tennis team. "Considering that we're going into the MAC league next year, this year was a great success," said Coach Ron Stablein.

Doubles player Dave Fajardo commented, "Even though tennis is an individual sport, we all functioned as one this season."

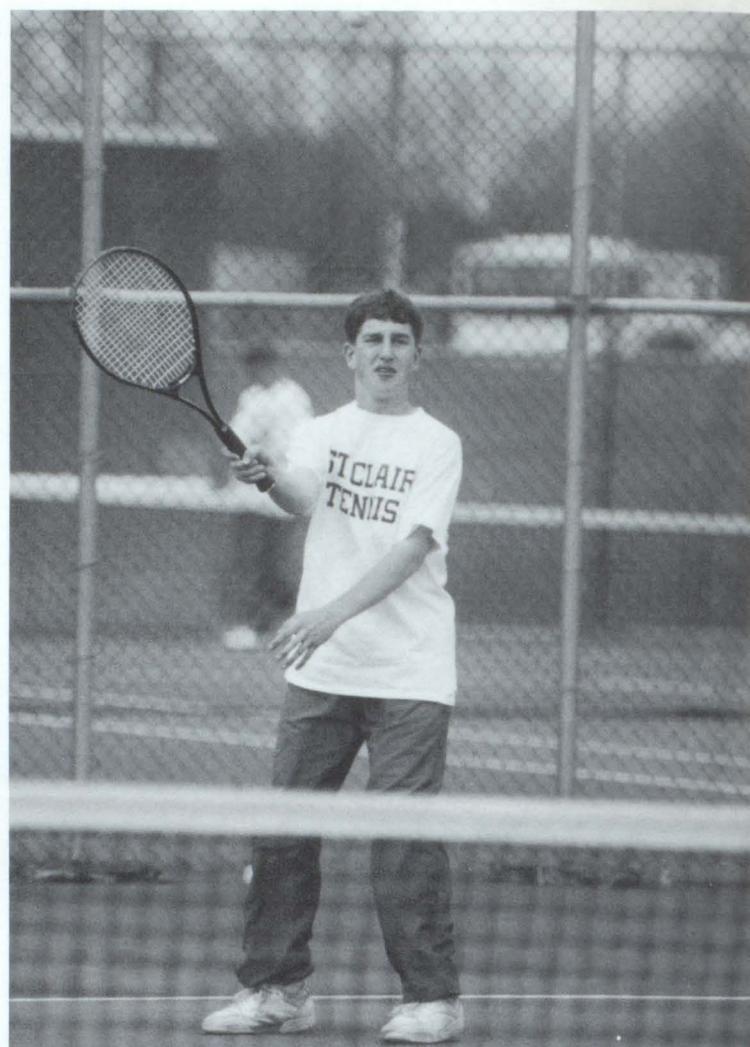

Just as teamwork is a factor in the Saint's success, players Nate McDonell and Ken Stockwell have other ways of ensuring their triumphs.

Ken stated, "I wear my reversible bandana every match and switch the colors."

Nate always wears his lucky headband to guarantee his effectiveness on the court.

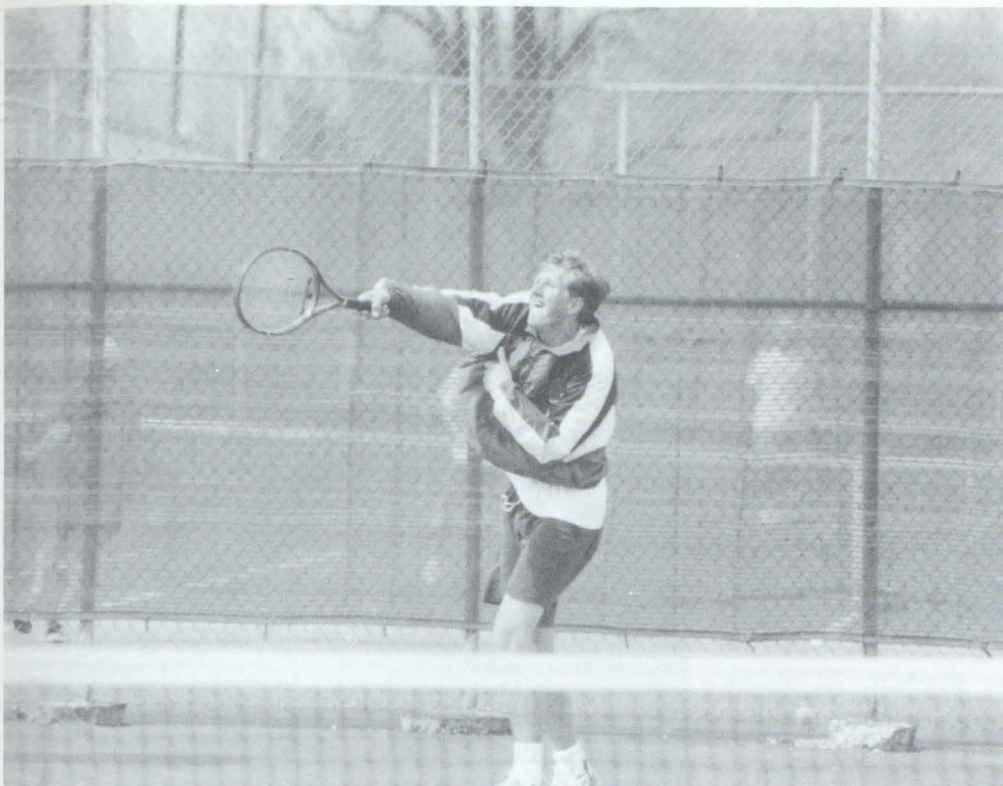

During the season, consecutive wins by singles players Steve Pillon, Eric Beck, Tim Marsee, and Nate McDonell secured enough points to earn them a place at districts.

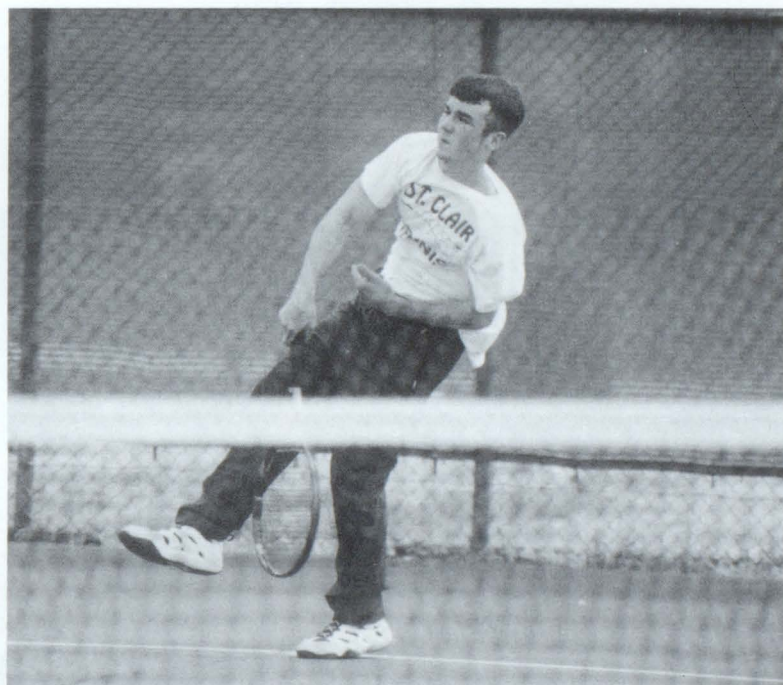

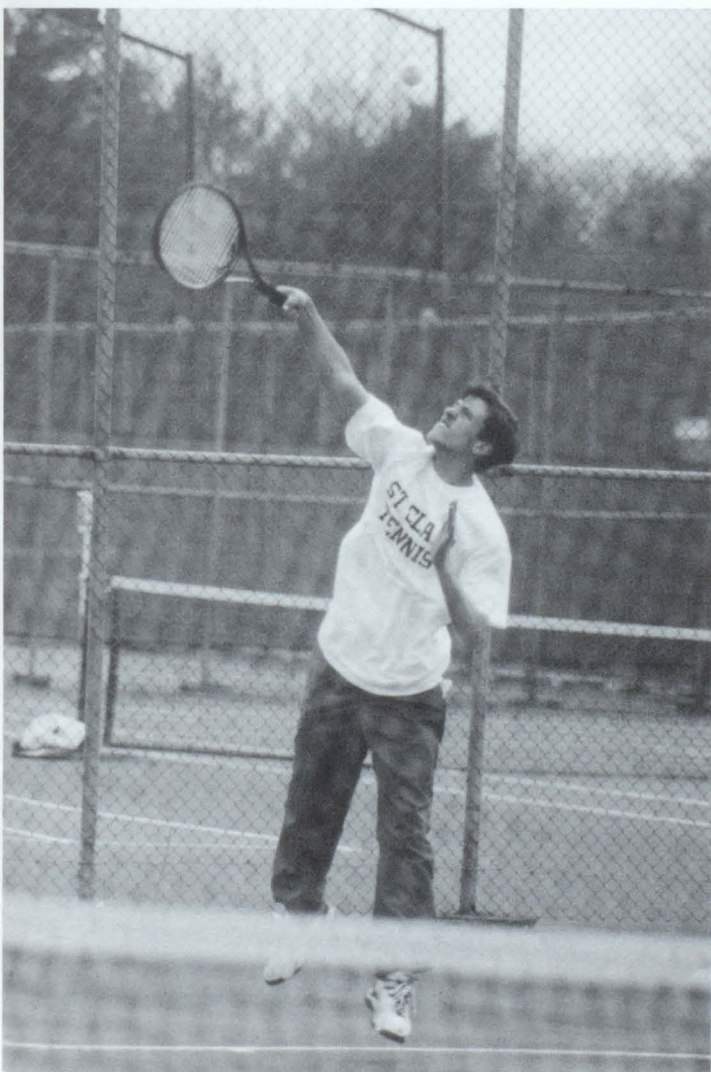

Nate McDonell anxiously awaits for the ball to be returned.

Checking his swing, Dave Fajardo prepares to slam his return.

"My arm is getting tired serving up aces," exclaims Tim McCulloch.

"You have to remain focused on each point or the momentum can swing to your opponent."
-Matt Weil, senior

Tim Marsee happily returns the ball to the other side of the net.

Rookie Steve Andrzejewski readies to ace his opponent on the serve.

One man balancing act Eric Beck regains his footing after whacking the ball.

BOLD & brave

The JV players determination and team work led them through a victorious season.

Maureen Carter and Carissa Emerich agree that, "Richmond was our biggest rival." However, their strong sense of competition led them to a 5-1 victory in their second game against Richmond.

The wet, soggy spring weather posed many hardships for the team. Kathy McCabe stated, "When it was raining, it was hard to play." As a result many of their games were cancelled.

Coaches Mahn and Osterland helped to motivate their team. Coach Osterland commented on the team's strength. "It didn't matter what the score was, the girls always fought back."

Despite the season's challenges the JV Saints persevered and ended the season with a 13-5 record.

Saints pitcher Jeani Westrick lets her curve ball fly over the plate.

Up at bat, Kristin Westrick keeps her eye on the ball.

After catching the ball Sarah Morgan quickly throws it to make another play.

"Softball is very competitive. We work hard to get what we want."

-Katie Vollmer, freshman

leanness & LUCK

"We try to practice how we're going to play in every game."

-John Jepson, freshman

Practice, team enthusiasm and talent held the JV Baseball team together.

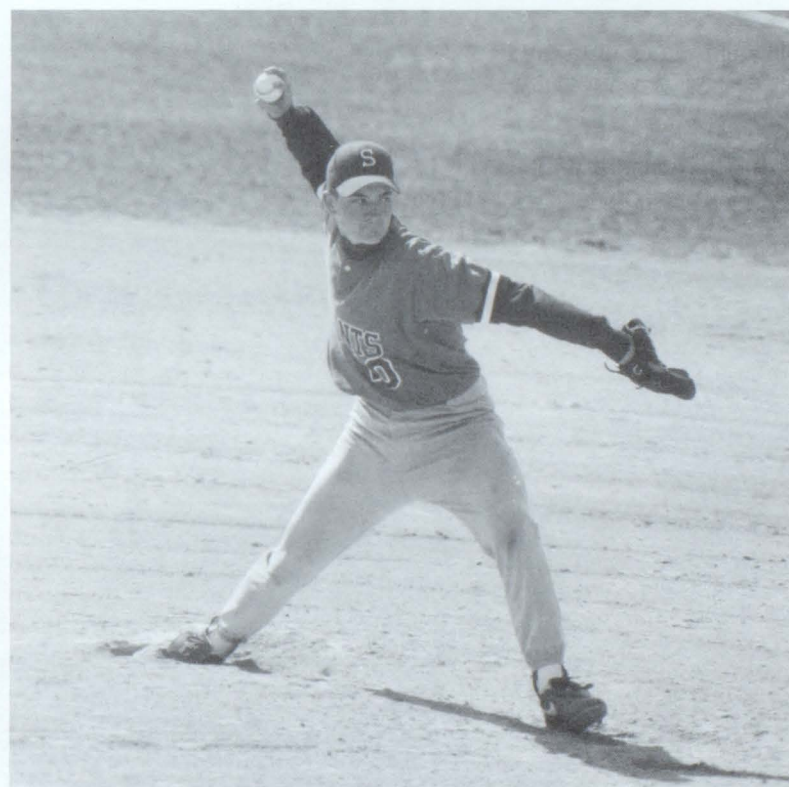

These team traits proved to be very useful as the team was challenged by this season's rainy weather. As a result, 15 of their 35 games were cancelled and only three practices were held outdoors.

However, because of their perserverance, weather didn't seem to be a factor for some players. Freshman new comer Chris Tallman explained, "Weather didn't matter or affect our game."

Coach Eberhard commented that the team's energy really pulled them through, "I had a great group of kids this year."

In the end, JV Baseball finished off their season with 9 wins and 10 loses.

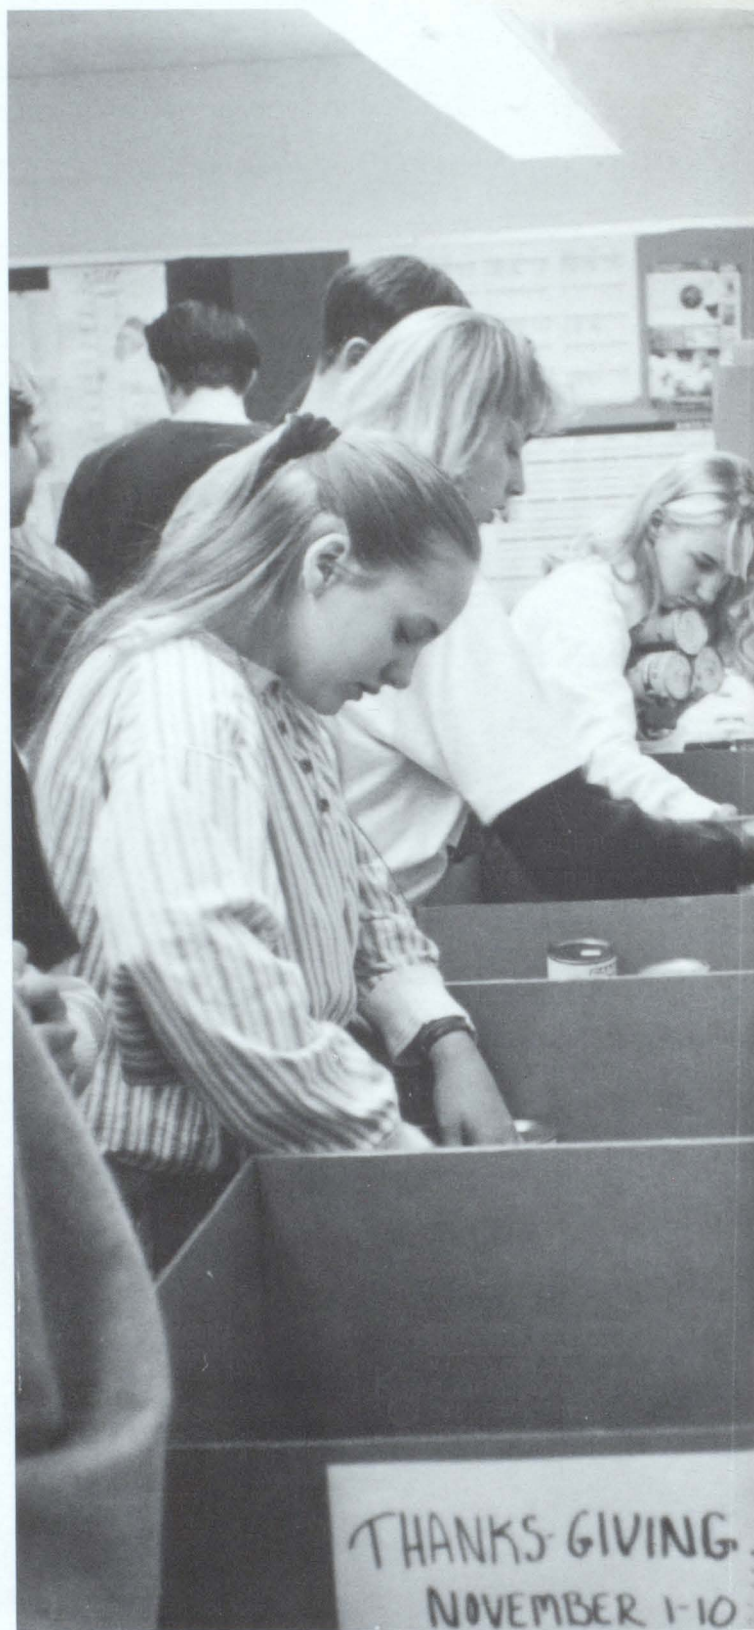

Ryan Biewer practices his swing, thinking ahead to a future home run.

Pitcher Jason Tyrell lets the ball loose, hoping to strike out the batter.

get out there!

Helping others has become important to SCHS students. This year, students got into the spirit of beautifying the school by repainting the school's bathrooms and cleaning up the yard. Beginning at center: Seniors Tanja Gauthier, Stacy Willmott and Angela Pauly sort canned food collected for Thanksgiving deliveries. Kristel Noon and Corrine Britz support the Saints through SADD's coat check. Eyes are on the ball as the Bi-County Bulls play St. Clair in a charity basketball game. Chris Schutt bares his arm to donate to the Red Cross.

The Value of a Smile

It costs nothing, but creates much.

It enriches those who receive without impoverishing those who give.

It happens in a flash, and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever.

None are so rich they can get along without it, and none so poor but are richer for its benefits.

It creates happiness in the home, fosters goodwill in a business, and is the countersign of friends.

It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and nature's best antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen, for it is something that is no earthly good to anyone until it is given away.

GETTING from Here to There

Beginning the 1996 yearbook, NOW I GET IT, was a difficult task. Selecting a theme and cover design was challenging because we had designed our own cover in 1995. How do you top that?

Getting to the part where we selected our cover for the 1996 book was painstaking. The yearbook students had varied and eclectic tastes. We colored design samples and let students give their opinions on color combinations.

Much to my surprise as adviser, students wanted a cover reflective of our school colors: red, white and blue.

How do you design a school yearbook cover then, that doesn't resemble a flag? This was a good question. By November, the entire class agreed to throw in a fourth color for the cover. We chose green (although yellow and orange reigned a close second).

Finally, we began to put together the book. Everything was late, because selecting a theme and cover took so long. Because of this, we missed every deadline known to the Josten's plant in Topeka, Kansas. I personally would like to thank the plant, and our service rep, Florence, and sales rep, Brenda Richardson for not saying a word about the lateness of our pages.

Some staff members just didn't seem to think yearbook was important enough to make the time for it. That didn't help our deadlines either. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise: Yearbook IS an after-school job!!

Other things complicated our job like missing sports scores that were never turned in and bad spring sports weather. Good-bye to the rain!

In any event, we used the following fonts in the book: Palatino for body copy and mug shots. GillSans is used in caption boxes and in some special copy places, like on division pages.

Imago, Barmeno, LITHOS and Optima are the fonts used for decorative headlines. We credit Regina High School for the division page design, and Bill Guyor for sports and school photography.
